WALL STREET performed as usual.

Money opened at 10 per cent and stocks fell from one to 10 points.

Later money went to 15 per cent. Then stocks went up. Explain that.

Bewildered victims of our national usury system, so ably encouraged by the Federal Reserve Bank, ask: "How long will high money last?"

The answer is, "As long as the lenders can make it last."

Monkeys in forest drink water contentedly. In civilization you give them milk and they won't drink water. Give them beer, they won't drink milk. Give them whiskey, they won't touch beer.

That's the way with some bankers. They were happy with 4 per cent call money. Now they insist on whiskey, which is 20 per cent, and they will get it if they can.

With the Federal Reserve helping them, and a few congressmen contributing their share of silliness, the usury probably will last.

Myron T. Herrick, United States Ambassador, is dead. The French plan a magnificent state funeral "the finest ever given to a foreigner on French soil." The Ambassador's body will return to America on a French man-o'-war.

All complimentary and pleasing. But how little good it does when you are dead. A coffin of pine boards, a few friends to speak well of you would do as well.

Our "stick-up" men are as numerous and interesting as knights errant in old days of chivalry.

Mary Johnson, Chicago stenographer lady, was "stuck up." The bandit took her purse, but cost, then said: "That's a pretty dress, take it off." She stood shivering.

Along came a young gentleman in a Mackinaw. He took her aside, saying: "Girlie, you had ought to have learned something from that other fellow. I'm a stick-up man, too. Look at these guns." He showed two "automatics," remarking that she had been enough for one night, took her home.

The great American nation sooner or later will have to do something about the crime tidal wave, born of prohibition, bootlegging, easy money and graft.

New York's Guaranty Trust and National Bank of Commerce united, with about two billions of resources, becoming "the biggest financial institution in the country." It was suggested here that Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City Bank, wouldn't stand that long.

He stood it no longer than yesterday when he announced the absorption of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, putting his bank's resources at the top of the heap.

Back in the shadow sits George F. Baker's gigantic bank, the First National. He has individual depositors with more money than the ordinary "big bank" has all together.

Perhaps he will decide to swallow something and become bigger than anybody.

If you have good bank stocks, don't sell.

Chang, fighting the so-called Nationalist government in China, lost 2600 men yesterday. To the western world that means as little as though a scullery maid had killed 2000 flies with one blow of a fly killer.

News from Nairobi tells of terrible famine conditions in the Belgian Congo. Thousands of natives are dead of hunger.

Women and children, struggling along forest roads through fever-infested districts, fall by the wayside and are eaten by hyenas before they are dead. Not a pleasant picture.

To the rest of the world that also is only a chapter in the history of fly-killing. The country reads and forgets. We are not our brother's keeper, in China or the Congo, or for that matter even in the slum next door.

News from China that does interest this and all other civilized nations is the fact that Shanghai has 1000 cases of meningitis. Nine foreigners are dead in the epidemic.

Diseases that start in Asia often spread over the world, as Asiatic cholera and bubonic plague have spread in recent times, and the horrible "black death" killing half the population in the Middle Ages.

Natives dying in aimless wars or in local famines, interest us little, but natives sending plagues to fill our graveyards interest us much.

MALONEY IN COURT CLASHES

Testimony in the Superior Court trial of a $10,000 damage suit brought by Charles A. McCarthy of Dorchester against Jim Maloney, South Boston heavyweight boxer and title contender, was concluded today after several lively clashes.

Maloney himself was on the stand for the greater part of the final session before Judge Madden and he made a general denial of the assault charges.

The case was expected to be under consideration by the jury this evening.

McCarthy charges that on January 15, 1927, in City Hall sq., Maloney punched and knocked him down, the injuries necessitating hospital treatment.

Under cross-examination, Maloney denied today that he ever had punched anyone out of the ring and he denied also knowing Frank A. Meaney whose picture was pointed out in the Rogues Gallery, according to previous testimony.

U. S. TOWN BOMBED; 2 HURT

Naco, Ariz., April 2 (AP)—The American town of Naco was bombed today, apparently unintentionally, and Ferry Baker, 35, of Aliance, Ohio, was wounded when a Mexican rebel airplane dropped four missiles in an attack on the federal stronghold of Naco, Sonora, on the Mexican side of the line.

A second American—a boy—was also reported hurt.

The aerial attack was a continuation of the bombings which have been carried on against the federal fortifications in Naco, Sonora.

Two of the four bombs dropped today fell on American soil. Many

Coolidge Tells How His Presidency Began

HEREWITH is presented the second installment of Part One of Mr. Coolidge's Own Story, which appeared in April Cosmopolitan. In the first installment, Mr. Coolidge wrote that when President Harding died he for the first time in his life felt qualified to fill the presidency. "It is a great advantage to a President, and a source of safety to the country, for him to know that he is not a great man. He told of taking the oath, administered by his father, "a simple and natural thing to do, but I can now realize much more the impressive form in the remote rural home he had left at 'being voted into church membership after he became the Nation's Chief Executive.

By CALVIN COOLIDGE,
Former President of the United States.

DURING my service in Washington I had seen a large amount of Government business. Peace had been made with the Central Powers, the tariff revised, the budget system adopted, taxation reduced, large payments made on the national debt, the Veterans' Bureau organized, important farm legislation passed, public expenditures greatly decreased, the differences with Colombia of twenty years' standing composed, and the Washington Conference had reached an epoch-making agreement for the practical limitation of naval armaments.

It would be difficult to find two years of peacetime history in all the record of our republic that were marked with more important and far-reaching accomplishments.

From my position as President of the Senate, and in my attendance upon the sessions of the Cabinet, I thus came into possession of a very wide knowledge of the details of the Government.

In spite of the remarkable record which had already been made, much remained to be done. While anything that relates to the functions of the Government is of enormous interest to me, its economic relations have always had a peculiar fascination for me.

Though these are necessarily predicated on order and peace, yet our people are so thoroughly law-abiding and our foreign relations are so happy that the problem of Government action which is to carry its benefits into the homes of all the people becomes almost entirely confined to the realm of economics.

My personal experience with business had been such as comes to a country lawyer.

My official experience with Government business had been of a wide range. As mayor, I had charge of the

10 YEARS MORE OF PUBLIC CONTROL OF 'L' AGREED UPON

Extension of public control of the Boston Elevated for 10 years has been agreed upon by the legislative sub-committee which is charged with the task of drafting a bill to solve the "El" problem, according to an unofficial report by one of its members today.

There were, however, conflicting reports of the progress being made by the sub-committee. Following a private session today Sen. Charles Warren of Arlington, chairman, said the members were still deadlocked on the question of taking over the Chelsea-Revere division of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway.

Sen. Warren refused to give any information as to what had been agreed upon, as there will be an other session before a report is made to the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs.

On the other hand, one of the members said the sub-committee had voted 2 to 2 in favor of taking over the Chelsea-Revere division, and had agreed on recommending the following, in addition to extension of public control for 10 years:

Setting up a district council of representatives from the various cities and town; reduction of the common stock, guaranteed dividend from 6 to 5 per cent; retiring the preferred stock; setting up a retirement fund for ultimate demolition of elevated structures and replacement with subways; no definite extensions of rapid transit lines, this to be left to the district council.

Lindy Off to See Anne

Brownsville Tex., April 2 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, en route to Mexico City to visit his fiance, Miss Anne Morrow, arrived at 7:40 o'clock this morning from San Antonio and left at 8:45.

The colonel, who refused to announce his destination before taking off from San Antonio, promptly said here that he was on his way to the Mexican capital.

GUN HALTS 3 IN REVERE

Three Somersworth, N. H., youths, said by police to be wanted in that town for auto theft, were arrested in the rear of Freeman's garage, Revere, today, where despite the keen, whistling wind they had gone to sleep in the back entrance.

The youths started to run when Patrolman John Hannigan, with drawn revolver, flashed his light on them.

They covered less than 100 yards, however, before the policeman's threat to shoot brought them to a halt.

They gave their names as Rene J. Norman, 19; Lucian Canniven, 16 and his brother Raymond, 13.

Somersworth police said an officer would be sent down to Revere to take them back to New Hampshire.

Report Against Old Age Pension Bill

Bills to establish a non-contributory system of old-age pensions to protect aged needy citizens from want, and for the enlargement of the public bequest fund, petitioned for by Wendell P. There of Squantum, were today reported unfavorably by the legislative committee on pensions.

Other petitions seeking old-age pensions and assistance boards, filed by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Joseph LaFontains of Brockton, and Representative Thomas S. Kennedy of Boston, were given the same report.

11 CHILDREN SAVED IN FIRE

Making four trips into their burning two-family dwelling at 157 Ash st., Reading, Joseph Tine and Edward Doucette today saved their 11 children and their wives, one of the latter seriously ill.

The house, a two and a half story structure, was ignited by flames from a burning barn and was destroyed as a loss estimated at $8000.

The rescued were Mrs. Tine and five children, ranging in age from two to eight years, and Mrs. Doucette and six children, the youngest 13 months and the oldest nine years.

Mrs. Tine, who is about to undergo an operation, was carried from the flaming house on a mattress to the home of a neighbor.

The fire was awakened by the sound of crackling flames, and discovered the barn to be in the grasp of a roaring fire. In his bare feet he ran a quarter of a mile, sounded the alarm and returned to find that the flames, borne by the high wind, had attacked the house. He aroused the Doucettes and the rescue work began. The cause of the fire was undetermined.

Il Duce and British Diplomat Talk Policy

Florence, April 2 (AP)—Premier Mussolini motored from Villa Carpena and met Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, at Villa Bagno Ripoli. Sir Austen was host to the Duce at luncheon. They let it be known that their two governments were agreed on the general lines of all European policies.

Dry League's Cash Short; Lays Off 3

Failure of dry advocates to rally to the financial support of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League at the last election has resulted in a deficit in the funds of the league and the dismissal of three of its personnel, it is revealed in the official publication of the league.

In addition to a reduction in its personnel, the League reduced its office space in the Transit Building and eliminated other expenses.

In reporting the deficit, Superintendent Gordon C. Macdaster said that the operating expenses of the league have been considerably reduced since election.

He reported also the need of carrying on a campaign to raise sufficient funds to eliminate the deficit, as well as to get money to build a "constructive educational campaign."

"After many conferences with our friends in the Legislature, I believe it would be unwise to present any legislation this session," McMaster said. "The consensus is windows in the business district here were shattered. The other two bombs fell in the Mexican town of Naco.

Baker was attended by a physician at the United States immigration office. He was wounded in the head by a fragment of one exploded bomb.

Terror held away for a few minutes after the bombing as those in danger ran for cover. Maj. Charles B. Hazeltine, commanding American troops here, declined to comment on the situation.

Late this afternoon two federal planes were reported to have flown over Nogales, another border town, and headed eastward towards the Mexican town of Naco.

The planes were said to be bombers from the federal air base at San Luis, Sonora. It was expected that they would make an attempt to bomb the Naco rebel camp.

A force of 1200 federals in Naco is holding the town against a threatened attack by 2000 rebel troops. A rebel advance on the town is expected at almost any hour.

Big Battle Resumes on Jiminez Front

El Paso, Tex., April 2 (INS)—Both federals and rebels today claimed victory on the Jiminez front, where fighting was resumed for possession of that strategic city.

According to federal sources, Gen. Juan Andreau Almazan's Government forces have occupied new positions northeast of Jiminez, preventing a rebel retirement towards Chihuahua City.

On the other hand, rebel spokesmen claim the federal attackers have been pushed back 20 miles to Corralitos.

The rebel army defending the city is estimated at 8000. The federals number 10,000. There have been heavy losses on both sides.

Federal troops have penetrated into a section of the city where furious hand-to-hand fighting occurred yesterday. Artillery and airplanes are being used by both sides in the battle. The federals say they hope to capture the city by night.

Rebels in Full Retreat Along Western Front

Mazatlan, Sinaloa, Mexico, April 2 (AP)—The rebel west coast army was in full retreat northward to Quila and Culiacan today after a disastrous battle which cost them their advanced positions, more than 100 dead, 50 prisoners and many wounded.

Their retreat was a complete rout, with many of their troops abandoning horses, arms and supplies in their haste to get to the comparative shelter of the woods. The encounter occurred along the Camino real—the old royal highway—relic of the Spanish occupation.

Rebel Leader Flays Calles and Morgan

El Paso, Tex., April 2 (AP)—A telegram from Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, Mexican revolutionist commander, addressed to "the American people," attacking the "powerful house of Morgan," was revealed here today.

"The rights of foreigners in Mexico have been disregarded except when their interests were connected with the private interests of Calles himself, or when he thought he could use them to strengthen his position as tyrant of Mexico," the message said.

"This is the case with the powerful house of Morgan."

Cypress Car in Which Crash Victims Just Miss Tragedy

THIS TROLLEY CAUSED ALL THE TROUBLE IN BROOKLINE VILLAGE

All the passengers injured in the Brookline wreck on the Elevated system today were riding in this car, which hopped the track and plunged into another car. That more persons were not injured more seriously was considered remarkable. (Photo by Boston Evening American staff photographer.)

TEN HURT IN TROLLEY CRASH AT BROOKLINE VILLAGE

All were cut or bruised, and Mrs. John Grant fainted from shock.

Taken to their homes in taxis were B. A. Houghton, 7 Texas st., Roxbury; Nora Merrigan, 63 Smith st., Roxbury; Mrs. Gately, 124 Warren st., Allston, and T. A. Conroy, 3 Upland rd., Brookline.

The collision occurred about 100 yards on the Boston side of Brookline Village, at a time when the streets were busy with traffic.

John Cole was motorman of the car bound to Dudley st., from Allston, and the Cypress st. trolley was operated by Martin Whalen. According to Elevated officials Whalen said he was making the curve when the rear trucks of his car left the rails and dragged from 20 to 25 feet.

At this time the other trolley approached and the left center door of the Cypress st. car struck the left front side of the other trolley.

According to officials, there were fourteen passengers in each car.

When the two heavy vehicles came together the crash was audible in Brookline Village, as windows were shattered and the door of the Cypress st. car was forced in. Women screamed and the children cried, their voices adding to the excitement.

An ambulance was summoned, but before its arrival the injured had been removed by autoists and taxicabs, a large number of which gathered within a short time.

Traffic was blocked on both tracks for some time, but in a short while wrecking apparatus arrived and straightened out the tangle. Elevated officials said the delay was fifteen minutes.

Says Women Visited Atlanta Prisoners

Atlanta, Ga., April 2 (AP)—The Constitution said today that special agents of the Department of Justice have interviewed a number of prisoners at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary concerning a report that former Warden John W. Snook permitted inmates to receive women visitors while he was in charge of the institution.

The newspaper said Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, special assistant attorney-general, planned court action against the former warden on the matter, which Snook himself has branded as "false, monstrous and without foundation."

The department investigators were said by the newspaper to have investigated charges that narcotics have been available to addicts within the prison and that disease is prevalent there.

In a statement Snook, whose resignation from his post became effective Sunday night, denied both of these charges, and again scored the Department of Justice agents in the institution as convicts.

It became known that four assistants of the former warden had been demoted to guard duty on the prison walls by order of Mrs. Willebrandt.

SUIT AGAINST MALONEY IS NEAR JURY

timony, as that of the man who assaulted McCarthy.

Later Maloney amended his testimony and admitted that Meaney during one of the Madison Square boxing bouts, was in Maloney's corner.

The clashes between counsel came when Joseph F. O'Connell, counsel for McCarthy, insisted on questioning Maloney with reference to financial relations between Jack Kearney and his manager, "Dan" Carroll.

When objection was raised to the line of cross-examination, O'Connell said to the court:

"I want to show how this case has been handled by Maloney and Carroll—the pair of them."

Attorney Joseph P. Walsh, Maloney's attorney, was on his feet instantly with an objection against the characterization.

Q. By O'Connell—Carroll is interested in your welfare in a financial way, isn't he? A. (after objection had been overruled)—Yes.

Q.—You go to Ann's Spa quite often, don't you, to confer with Carroll? A.—Yes.

Maloney was followed on the stand by Patrolman Joseph A. Marshall of the Milk st. station, who testified relative to securing a warrant against the man named Meaney and alleging assault on McCarthy.

Testimony was then closed and arguments began.

Gale Wrecks 2 Planes at Boston Airport

The wind was whistling and roaring when "Danny" Duggan, night man at Boston Airport, took a look at the first streak of dawn. Then something made his heart leap. A big Challenger plane of Skyways, Inc., had "taken off," and, 25 feet in the air, staggered harboward.

Duggan just gaped and watched—and saw the plane go over on its nose and crash upside down on another Challenger.

Duggan got Douglas Hustid of the Curtiss service in from Winthrop and between them they ran all the outside planes into the lee of the hangars.

Damage to the wrecked planes was estimated at about $2000. Charles Chick of Gloucester is owner of the second Challenger.

There were many other freaky accidents in Greater Boston as the wind reached a velocity of 32 miles in hour. Telephone and light wires and trees were blown down, including one large tree on Blue Hill ave., just beyond Mattapan sq.

Rain and warmer is the prediction of the weather man, following a drop of 13 degrees which gave Bostonians a surprise and brought out winter wraps today. The mercury was at 29 at 8 a. m. and there after rose slowly.

There are now no storms in sight east of the Mississippi, where gales in the past 24 hours caused 11 deaths in 13 states.

HARBOR BRIDGE BIG STATE AD, SAYS BACKER

The proposed privately built $10,000,000 toll bridge from South Boston to Hull was hailed as the "biggest advertisement the state could have" by Chester I. Campbell of Quincy at a hearing today before the legislative committee on highways and motor vehicles.

Campbell, one of the petitioners for a charter of incorporation for the Boston-South Shore Bridge Company, declared that the harbor structure would attract thousands of foreign automobiles and Boom the entire district from Quincy to the end of the Cape.

"This is one of the greatest solutions of the traffic congestion to the South Shore that could be devised," he continued.

He disagreed, as a former mayor of Quincy, with the stand taken by the present mayor of that city who claims that the bridge would hurt the city because it would divert automobile traffic.

"It will relieve many of the vital points in the traffic situation there," he said. "As a vice president of one of Quincy's banks and vitally interested in the city's welfare, I would be the last to advocate anything that would do the least harm to the city."

Find Kidnaped Girl Bound to Bedpost

Philadelphia, April 2 (AP)—A three-weeks' search by police ended today with Gaetana Aidonido, 48, in jail, charged with abducting Rita Cerulo, 16-year-old schoolgirl, South Philadelphia. Rita was rescued from a hut in the woods at Pitman, N. J. Aidonido was captured in a chase. The girl was found bound to a bedpost. She said, she had been beaten.

Capt. Andrews to Command Texas

New London, April 2 (AP)—Capt. Adolphus Andrews, commander of the submarine base here, will take command of the battleship Texas, flagship of the United States fleet, when he is relieved of his present tour of duty next June by Capt. Wilson Brown, at present aide to President Hoover and commander of the yacht Mayflower.

Highway Scandal Is Probed in Chicopee

Irregularities in the building activities of Chicopee are alleged in a report of an audit of the accounts of that city given out today by State Director of Accounts Waddell at the State House.

An order passed July 30 appropriating $1500 for the purchase of a lot of land for highway purposes, which was assessed for only $500, the directors reported, "was invalid," among other items.

Services for Quincy Man

The funeral of Walter M. Packard, a Harvard man, son of Col Abner B. Packard, who command ed the 4th Massachusetts Infantry in the Civil War, was held at his home, 1 Chestnut pl., Quincy.

Elopement Is Bared by New Phone Book

The new telephone directory came out in Lynn today—and in practically no time at all one of those girl friends had stumbled into the elopement last February of Myrtle Gold thwait, 22-year-old telephone operator at the Lynn exchange.

Formerly the telephone girl had her telephone listed under her maiden name at her mother's home in Alden st.

When the new books came out today, a girl friend, looking up Myrtle's number, discovered it was missing. She called information and learned that the former telephone had been changed to a listing as Mrs. Alfred Badger, at the same address.

And so the girl friend called this number, got the new Mrs. Badger's mother on the line and asked her all about it. The mother previously had not known, she said, of her daughter's marriage to Badger, former High School athlete.

Many telephones soon were ringing and both Myrtle and Badger admitted the elopement to Portsmouth, N. H., on February 4.

Since then each has been living at home.

Benjamin Fisher, Publisher, Dead

Benjamin Fisher, president of the Financial Publishing Company, died today in his home on Marsh st., Dedham. He was born in West Dedham, now Westwood, July 21, 1857, and was graduated from Harvard in 1880.

His wife, Anna R., and a son, Benjamin, Jr., survive him. Funeral services will take place at 3 p. m. Thursday in the Unitarian Church, Dedham.

that we adopt a watchful-waiting policy, taking care of bills which the opponents of prohibition may present."

Intimating that police in Boston and over the State are neglectful with regard to prohibition enforcement, MacMaster said:

"Vice and crime were rampant in the city of New York and little effort was made to improve conditions until the appointment of Police Commissioner Whalen. Without a state enforcement law, he could have closed his eyes to conditions, but, on the contrary, has given orders to raid every place where evidences of liquor or vice is found.

"If this can be done in a city having no enforcement law, what reason is there for the police of Boston or any Massachusetts city or town neglecting to clean up territory under their control."

Piano Pupils Wreck Home

When Joseph S. Sosnowski of Boston was a motorman on the El, he and his wife were happy, but—

When Joe studied music in his spare time and became a teacher of pianoforte, discord entered the Sosnowski home.

Both husband and wife told their versions of the sad tale to Judge Dolan in Suffolk Probate Court today in support of cross suits for divorce.

Sosnowski said that harmony flew out of his home when girl piano pupils started coming in. Wifely jealousy, all causeless, wrecked his marriage, he testified.

Mrs. Sosnowski said that music teaching didn't pay. After he quit his motorman's job, her husband gave her too little money, she declared. Her husband bit her, too, she claimed. She got the divorce —plus $800 lump alimony.

The domestic help problem is solved by having a chickerette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Want columns.

URGE STATE TO HELP BOOST INDUSTRIES

Establishment by the State of the Massachusetts Industrial Commission to promote and develop industrial, agricultural and recreational resources of the State was urged by speakers today at a hearing before the House ways and means committee.

Representative Luitwieler of Newton outlined the need for coordination of the advertising and boosting of the advantages of Massachusetts. He urged an appropriation this year of $25,000 and $50,000 in future years.

The commission would gather statistics on industry, agriculture, and recreational opportunities, work to bring new industries into the state, more tourists, co-ordinate the efforts of hotels, real estate men, chambers of commerce and the New England Council.

A long list of big manufacturers and 38 chambers of commerce were placed on record in favor.

Gow Asks Public for Service Suggestions

Suggestions or advice looking to improvement in the postal service were invited from patrons of the Boston postal district in a circular letter addressed to business houses today by Postmaster Charles R. Gow.

"I feel," he writes, "that it is the right of our patrons to ask and our duty to give serious consideration to any proposal which will promote the efficiency of our postal service and I shall therefore appreciate any suggestions or advice looking to improvement in the service."

Hoover Opposes U. S. Curb on Oil Prices

Washington, April 2 (AP)—President Hoover is of opinion that federalization of the Sherman law to permit interstate agreements for curtailment of oil production would necessitate federal regulation of prices and to this he is opposed.

The question was raised at a recent meeting of the American Petroleum Institute, a delegation from which is to discuss the subject tomorrow with the federal oil conservation board.

A new draft of a resolve authorizing and directing the public works department to relocate hangars and other buildings at the East Boston airport now utilised by the aviation units of the Massachusetts National Guard was reported "ought to pass" today by the House ways and means committee.

Favors a Physical Test for Waltham School Teachers

Declaring the physical condition of a teacher is just as important as educational equipment Supt. William H. Slayton of Waltham, recommended to the school board today that all teachers be subjected to a physical examination before being placed on the pay roll.

The matter will be heard at the next meeting.

CUSTOMS BOAT MADE A SEARCH OF FISH YACHT

New York, April 2 (AP)—Customs officials announced today that it was a patrol boat of the Customs Enforcement Bureau that halted Stuyvesant Fish's yacht Restless near the States of Liberty Saturday to search it for liquor.

Fish, a wealthy broker and sportsman, had complained to Washington that the search had been conducted in a high-handed and abusive manner, with several men pointing revolvers at him and his family while another searched the yacht. No liquor was found and the yacht was allowed to proceed.

Fish believed the boarding craft to belong to the coast guard. However, William S. Conroy, in charge of the Customs Enforcement Bureau, said he had information leading him to believe that a customs boat had made the search. Conrow's assistant announced that this fact had been definitely established, but denied that any abusive methods had been employed.

MOVE TO SELL SAILORS' HOME IN QUINCY

A petition for permission to sell the National Sailors' Home in Quincy for not less than $150,000 was filed in the Supreme court by George F. Hall, treasurer.

Due to the fact that the Home was not being conducted in the interests of veterans, an investigation was held last month by assistants of the attorney-general, who is charged by law with overseeing such public charitable institutions.

Hall names Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner as respondent in his petition in which he says there are only 11 inmates and the cost of upkeep is excessive. The petition suggests proceeds of the proposed sale be used for supporting families of deceased sailors and marines. The adjacent cemetary would not be sold.

Veterans' organizations have displayed keen interest in the attorney-general's investigation of the place and signified that they would send representatives to any probable court hearings on the subject.

2 Killed, 9 Hurt in 70-Mile Gale in N. Y.

Rochester, N. Y., April 2 (INS)—Havoc caused by yesterday's wind storm totaled two men killed, nine persons injured, and trees, telephone poles and wires torn down in northern New York.

One man was killed when his barn collapsed while he was milking. The second man was drowned in a boathouse near Watertown, when waves from Lake Ontario swept away the building. Hundreds of cattle perished in the 70-mile gale.

Budapest Rejects General Motors Plan

Budapest, April 2 (INS)—The Ministry of Commarce has turned down a $1,000,000 project of the General Motors Corporation for the erection of an assembly factory at Szeged, near the Rumanian frontier, with a capacity of 10,000 cars annually.

It is understood the General Motors Corporation will approach the Government with a new project.

Crazed Man Shoots Four

Newark, N. J. April 2, (INS)—Two white men were killed and two wounded by William Bell, a negro, who ran amuck here today with a shotgun and revolver. He finally shot himself and is dying in a hospital.

The dead are Charles Ramberger, 63, garage cashier, and Julius Rabinowitz, 36, salesman; both of Newark.

The shooting started when Rabinowitz went to Bell's house to ask Bell's wife to do some washing.

WIDOW, 60, FIGHTS MASKED BANDIT, BUT HE GETS $25

6 INJURED ARE RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Thirteen men were hurled to the pavement and six of them severely injured when the truck in which they were riding struck a light car and overturned it at Tremont st. and Broadway today.

The men who were riding in the truck and who were bound for Providence to work on a construction job, were scattered over the street and six were taken to the City Hospital.

They were:

WILLIAM MURPHY, 50, David rd., Wilmington, contusions.

CHARLES WARD, 45, 213 Lexington st., East Boston, possible fractured collar bone.

MICHAEL F. WALSH, 46, Main st., Wilmington, scalp and elbow injuries.

EDMUND D. BURKE, 30, 745 Tremont st., Boston, laceration of scalp.

WILLIAM F. BURKE, 21, 8 Ellis ave., Medford, lacerations.

ARTHUR DEROME, 58, 247 Bennington st., East Boston; lacerations.

The truck, a one-ton vehicle, driven by Michael Rejo of Bowen ave., Medford, was bound south on Tremont st., headed toward Providence. A coupe operated by Vernon M. Ebbs of Danforth rd., Somerville, pulled out of Broadway as the truck approached.

Rejo told police he had new brake bands which refused to function properly and when he applied them the truck swerved, struck the coupe and overturned.

The street resembled a battlefield for a few minutes, with injured men lying about. Police of Division 4 were notified and in a short time had their ambulance on the scene. In the meantime some of the more severely injured had been taken to the hospital in taxicabs.

WRESTS A GUN FROM HER GRASP

Southbridge, April 2—Waking early today to find herself confronted in her bedroom by a masked and armed bandit, Mrs. Hattie C. Wright, 60-year-old widow put up a desperate hand-to-hand battle for her valuables, but was finally robbed of $25 after a struggle.

Mrs. Wright lives alone in an isolated neighborhood on Worcester st. She was in bed when she heard a noise in her room and snapped on the light.

A tall, slim man, his face hidden by a black mask, stepped to her side, one told police, and thrust a revolver into her face, demanding that she give him her money and be quick about it.

Mrs. Wright handed the bandit $3, telling him that was all she had. He demanded more.

Then, reaching under her pillow as if to get a pocketbook, the woman snatched forth a revolver of her own. Before she could level the weapon the robber grappled with her.

The gun was wrested from her grasp after a tussle.

The bandit then forced Mrs. Wright to stand with her hands in the air while he rifled her bureau, tore apart her bed and searched her clothing on a nearby chair.

The man finally discovered a purse, containing $22. Taking this he fled, after cutting the wires of the telephone. Mrs. Wright dressed and walked to a neighbor's to give the alarm.

Entry was made to Mrs. Wright's house by a rear window, which was jimmied open.

FINE WOMAN FOR BEATING RIVAL WITH HANDBAG

A man was at the bottom of it all, according to Mrs. Effie Morgan, of Milford, who was fined $20 in municipal court today for hitting Mrs. Mary Lynd, of Foxboro, with a handbag, knocking the latter's glasses off and causing her to lose a set of teeth.

Mrs. Morgan testified that she met Mrs. Lynd on Milk st., Boston, and saw her in the company of her own former suitor.

Taunting her rival, Mrs. Morgan, according to the testimony, said, "You've got him now, but I supported him for eight years."

ACCUSES WIFE IN POISON PLOT MYSTERY CASE

By reporting that he believed his wife was trying to poison him to get his $40,000 insurance, a West Somerville man today gave the police a mystery, which remains unsolved.

He telephoned Lieut. William G. Kenney at Somerville headquarters before daylight and said he thought poison had been put in a can of condensed milk. He later took the remains of the milk to the station, together with the telephone instrument, to show that the wires had been cut after his message.

He was sent to Somerville Hospital because he had drunk some of the milk, but doctors could find no trace of poison in his stomach. He said he intended to apply for a divorce today, and then he disappeared.

A HOME PAPER FOR HOME PEOPLE
BOSTON, TUESDAY, APRIL 2, 1929

Only $14.65 a Week! Live on It? Can She?

HOW much of living is there in $14.65 a week? Perhaps you know already. Perhaps you do not, and if so you are lucky in not having to learn by experience.

The Minimum Wage Commission has set this sum as the minimum rate for women and girls in the boot and shoe cut stock and findings occupation, and the budget the commission outlines carries a 44-cent apportionment for recreation, 35 cents put away for vacation, 25 cents for insurance and 56 cents for carfare.

To learn just how a girl manages to live on $14.65 a week, Miss Helen Coolidge of the Boston Evening American staff will adjust herself to the commission's budget for one week, beginning today.

She will expend the alloted $8.42 for board and room, the $2.45 for clothing, the commission-sanctioned 45 cents for laundry, the 90 cents set aside for doctor, dentist and oculist, and the other items as measured by the board.

Beginning in next Tuesday's Boston Evening American she will relate her experiences. They are certain to be interesting.

MOTHER FIGHTS FOR CUSTODY OF BOY, 14

Asserting that her 14-year-old son Harold was induced to swear on a Bible that he would not try to see her, Mrs. Alice Stewart of Dane st., Cambridge, in Middlesex probate court today, fought for custody of the boy.

She said the boy's sister, Louise, who lives with her, has rarely seen her brother since they were small children. The girl is 15.

Judge Leggat was informed that Mrs. Stewart and her husband, Charles, separated 11 years ago and that she obtained a divorce three years ago. She was given custody of the daughter, but the boy was left with his father's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh MacMillan of Hancock st., Dorchester.

After MacMillan had told his story, asking that the boy be left with his wife and him, because they had reared him from the age of three and were greatly attached to him, Judge Leggat said he wanted to talk with the boy and would make a decision afterwards. He will see the boy in private. He urged the parties to try to reach a friendly agreement.

"My husband was supposed to pay $5 a week for Louise's support but he paid me only $20 in all in three years," testified Mrs. Stewart. "I am working and am struggling to save my home, but I want my boy and he wants to be with me and his sister."

MacMillan testified that when he and his wife took the boy, at the age of three, his hair had been bleached. It is now black. He said the father had remarried and lives in Roxbury.

Autoist Caught Going 63, Blames Wind and Wins

Webster, April 2 (AP)—During the gale when Chief Templeman clocked a motorist splitting the wind at 63 per on Thompson rd. he shot into the suction on his patrol motorcycle, and at the end of a two-mile concrete straightaway pulled alongside the four-wheeled flash with the remark: "Going pretty fast, buddy."

"Only about 40," the deputy was calmly assured as the lone motorist stopped his car and stepped into the highway.

"Forty?" exclaimed the deputy. "Why, you were doing 63."

The motorist first held his right hand up in the air, then his left. "Yep, guess you are right, officer. The wind was behind me."

At this moment a gust of wind nearly took the officer off his feet, but he grasped his motorcycle and saved himself as he grasped, "You win," and rode away.

ESCAPE THROUGH SMOKE

Esther Goldman Jeanette Chase

ROUTED FROM HOME BY FLAMES

Awakened from sleep by fire at 214 Harvard st., Dorchester, six persons fled in hastily-donned clothes. Among them were Esther Goldman, 18, and her cousin, "Jackie" Chase, 19.

SIX FLEE FIRE IN DORCHESTER; TWO ALARMS

Six persons clad in night clothes fled through a smoke-filled hallway to safety early today when flames swept the wooden dwelling at 214 Harvard st., Dorchester, resulting in two alarms before they were checked.

Aroused by the smoke in her bedroom on the second floor, Mrs. Hyman Goldman spread the alarm that enabled other members of her family to reach the street before the fire gained progress.

Mrs. Goldman's cries were heard by a son, Israel, who was asleep on the first floor of the building, a two-story structure. He wrapped a coat about him and ran to the fire box at Harvard and Wales sts. to sound the alarm.

Israel then returned to the house and, with his brother Max and their father, Hyman, assisted Mrs. Goldman, her daughter Esther, and a cousin, Jeanette Chase, through the hallway to the street. All took refuge in the homes of neighbors, while firemen battled to check the progress of the flames.

Jones Law Doesn't Apply to California

San Francisco, April 2 (INS)—The "five and ten" sentences of the Jones Federal law are not applicable in California under a ruling today by Atty.-Gen. Webb.

The California State prohibition enforcement law is a copy of the Volstead act in the matter of punishment and any additional provision calling for further penalties Webb held to be unconstitutional.

FIRST 'JONES' CASES BEFORE U. S. JURY

The first federal grand jury in this district to investigate alleged offences amenable to the Jones act convened today at the Federal building.

Government officials were reticent concerning the number and nature of the cases to be presented, although Asst. U. S. Atty. Stone admitted he was prepared to submit evidence in recent Boston liquor raids.

Two weeks ago, when the grand jury was empanelled by Judge Brewster, it was admonished from the bench to disregard minor infractions of prohibition and to give its attention to bootlegging on a commercial scale.

Federal officials and lawyers are awaiting with interest the outcome of today's deliberations.

West Quincy Man Fined in Rum Case

Timothy Buckley of West Quincy who faced both state and federal prosecutions as the result of the explosion of an alleged still in his home on Bryant st., had the first of his penalties assessed upon him today.

In Quincy district court he was fined $50 on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale. In the United States court Friday he will be charged with illegally manufacturing liquor.

Wets, Drys the World O'er Rap W. C. T. U. Report

Evanston, Ill., April 2 (AP)—Wets and drys alike, from almost every city of the United States, all countries of Europe and others in Asia and Africa, have wired and written the Women's Christian Temperance Union because of a typographical error in a report of deaths from alcohol.

The erroneous report said that alcoholism deaths had increased 4000 per cent under prohibition. The survey said the death rate in 1827 was 40 per million population, an increase of one over 1926. The survey, prepared by Cora Frances Stoddard, director of scientific temperance investigation, for the W. C. T. U., said the death rate in 1927 was 16 per million less than the alcohol fatalities during the saloon years of 1915-1917.

N. E. SOFT COAL R. R. RATES CUT IS OPPOSED

Washington, April 2 (INS)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today considered a petition from Bituminous Coal Operators' Associations for suspension of proposed reduced carload rates from southwestern Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia to eastern New England and eastern Canada, as proposed by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie and the Pennsylvania Railroads.

The general effect of the proposed adjustment would be to reduce by 10 to 15 cents a gross ton the present rates and place the mines on the roads named on a parity with those in the so-called Westmoreland group.

Signers of the petition taken up today include the New England Coal & Coke Co.

12 YEARS EACH FOR 3 HUB MEN

San Juan, Porto Rico, April 2 (AP)—Judge Wells today sentenced to 12 years imprisonment each, Capt. Andres Veiz, Alesio Sessino and Gordon B. Butler, all of or near Boston, Mass., for smuggling 10 aliens into the United States from Havana on the yacht Calumet.

Notice of appeal was given with the court fixing the appeal bond at $20,000 each.

Capt. Veiz, a native of Porto Rico, but long a resident of Boston, was in command of the yacht which Serentino owned. Butler, whose home is in Rockland, Mass., was the mate.

At the trial alien witnesses testified they paid sums of $200 and $300 to be landed in either continental United States or on some American island.

Time and Place Do Not Count When There's a Laugh

Chicago, April 2 (AP)—When Thomas J. Fillion goes to the movies, it is to laugh.

Fillion guffawed in the wrong place at the State-Lake Theatre, so, at least, the management contended. The film was sad; a circumstance which did not coincide with Fillion's mood, so he waxed merry as others wept.

Someone threw him out for his risibility less manepty. He sued. Today his attorney contended that man's right to laugh, even at a sad movie, had been vindicated by a $300 settlement in Fillion's favor.

'SPITE' THIEF SLASHES HATS

Easter finery was maliciously destroyed and a pocketbook containing $17 stolen by a burglar who entered the home of Mrs. Sarah Gann on the top floor of a three-family house on Chestnut st., Chelsea, while all the occupants were asleep.

Three new Easter hats were cut into shreds and left on the kitchen floor and three pairs of women's shoes were taken out and placed in a row under the clothes line in the back yard.

A black satin dress was removed from a bedroom in which some of Mrs. Gann's family were sleeping and this was taken away, along with the money and a bunch of keys. Mrs. Gann told the police who believe it was a "spite job."

COOLIDGE HELD CONSTRUCTIVE ECONOMY AS KEY TO PROGRESS

HIGH RATES OF TAXATION HAD RETARDED DEVELOPMENT

financial affairs of the city of Northampton. As lieutenant-governor, I was chairman of the committee on finance of the Governor's Council, which had to authorize every cent of expenditures of the Commonwealth before they could be made. As governor, I was chargeable with responsibility both for appropriations and for expenditures.

My fundamental idea of both private and public business came first from my father. He had the strong New England trait of great repugnance at seeing anything wasted. He was a generous and charitable man, but he regarded waste as a moral wrong.

Wealth comes from industry and from hard experience of human toil. To dissipate it in waste and extravagance is disloyalty to humanity.

This is by no means a doctrine of parsimony. Both men and nations should live in accordance with their means and devote their substance not only to productive industry, but to the creation of the various forms of beauty and the pursuit of culture which give adornments to the art of life.

When I became President it was perfectly apparent that the key by which the way could be opened to national progress was constructive economy.

Only by the use of that policy could the high rates of taxation, which were retarding our development and prosperity, be diminished, and the enormous burden of our public debt be reduced.

Without impairing the efficient operation of all the functions of the Government, I have steadily and without ceasing pressed on in that direction.

This policy has encouraged enterprise, made possible the highest rate of wages which have ever existed, returned large profits, brought to the homes of the people the greatest economic benefits they ever enjoyed and given to the country as a whole an unexampled era of prosperity. This well-being of my country has given me the chief satisfaction of my administration.

One of my most pleasant memories will be the friendly relations which I have always had with the representatives of the press in Washington. I shall always remember that at the conclusion of the first regular conference I held with them at the White House office they broke into hearty applause.

I suppose that in answering their questions I had been fortunate enough to tell them what they wanted to know in such a way that they could make use of it.

While there have been newspapers which supported me, of course there have been others which opposed me, but they have usually been fair. I shall always consider it the highest tribute to my administration that the opposition have based so little of their criticism on what I have really said and done.

Silence Golden

"Words of President Ought Not Be Used Lightly"

I have often said that there was no cause for feeling disturbed at not being misrepresented in the press. It would be only when they began to say things detrimental to me which were true that I should feel alarm.

Perhaps one of the reasons I have been a target for so little abuse is because I have tried to refrain from abusing other people.

The words of the President have an enormous weight and ought not to be used indiscriminately.

It would be exceedingly easy to set the country all by the ears and foment hatreds and jealousies, which, by destroying faith and confidence, would help nobody and harm everybody. The end would be the destruction of all progress.

While everyone knows that evils exist, there is yet sufficient good in the people to supply material for most of the comment that needs to be made.

The only way I know to drive out evil from the country is by the constructive method of filling it with good. The country is better off tranquilly considering its blessings and merits, and earnestly striving to secure more of them, than it would be in nursing hostile bitterness about its deficiencies and faults.

Notwithstanding the broad general knowledge which I had of the Government, when I reached Washington I found it necessary to make an extensive survey of the various departments to acquaint myself with details. This work had to be done intensively from the first of August to the middle of November, in order to have the background and knowledge which would enable me to discuss the state of the Union in my first message to the Congress.

Although meantime I was pressed with invitations to make speeches, I did not accept any of them. The country was in mourning and I felt it more appropriate to make my first declaration in my message to the Congress. Of course, I opened the Red Cross convention in October, which was an official function for me as its president.

"Fortunate in Securing Him as Secretary"

I was especially fortunate in securing C. Bascom Slemp as my secretary, who had been a member of the House for many years and had a wide acquaintance with public men and the workings of legislative machinery. His advice was most helpful. I had already served with all the members of the Cabinet, which perhaps was one reason I found them so sympathetic.

Among its membership were men of great ability who have served their country with a capacity which I do not believe was ever exceeded by any former Cabinet officers.

A large amount was learned from George Harvey, ambassador to England, concerning the European situation. He not only had a special aptitude for gathering and digesting information of that nature, but had been located at London for two years, where most of it centered.

I called in a great many people from all the different walks of life over the country. Among the first to come voluntarily were the veteran president and the secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Gompers and Mr. Morrison. They brought a formal resolution expressive of personal regard for me and assurance of loyal support for the Government.

Farm organizations and business men, publishers, educators and many others—all and to be consulted.

In Part Two of Mr. Coolidge's Own Story, which will appear in the May issue of Cosmopolitan, on sale the latter part of this week, the former President tells why he did not "choose to run," why he does not believe in a third term and what he did to prevent his nomination in Kansas City.

THOUSANDS PAY LAST HONORS TO HERRICK

Paris, April 2 (AP)—Frenchmen passing the bier of Ambassador Herrick signed the register at the American embassy today at the rate of ten a minute.

The file comprised the most humble and France's most distinguished and aristocratic; a cardinal and ambassadors were among them, a former president of the council, and representatives of French royalty. But the mass of visitors were just plain French people, unknown personally to the ambassador's family or those at the embassy.

A photograph of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was on the mantlepiece, holding the place of honor for one who was nearest his heart. His favorite dog, "Max," remained outside the bedroom door and appeared inconsolable.

The ceremony Thursday will open with the funeral oration pronounced by Premier Raymond Poincare himself. Then the cortege will form outside with a guard of honor, to which the ambassador is entitled as holder of the rare distinction of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor. The line will proceed a short distance to the American pro-cathedral where there will be an impressive memorial service.

The body will then be placed on a special train and conveyed to the canal where it will be taken aboard the new cruiser Tourville which will depart immediately for New York. Formely Herrick, the ambassador's son, will accompany it to Cleveland for interment.

WIFE DIVORCES SCION OF RICH R. I. FAMILY

Providence, April 2—Mrs. Ruth H. Dunn of Holyoke obtained a divorce today from Shirley M. Dunn, scion of a wealthy Woonsocket mill-owning family, on the ground of cruelty.

The young wife, by deposition, said that her husband wooed and won her when she was an inexperienced college girl in her junior year at Mt. Holyoke.

Married her to please his parents.

Told her on their wedding day their marriage would turn out all right if she let him have his own way in everything.

Treated her "like a sister" on their honeymoon.

Expressed the opinion that a wife was "like a new automobile." Just a strange piece of mechanism to be studied and mastered.

When she was sick with a nervous breakdown, visited her once "for appearance's sake." Then went on a trip around the world.

And once he struck her, she said.

"Extreme cruelty," was Judge Poulfot's finding.

C.; to Mrs. Lillian Gertrude Phillips Hyatt of Brookline against Charles Frederick Hyatt of Boston; to Mrs. Ruth E. Norwood of Quincy against Douglas R. CUTTER URGES TRADE IN LATIN AMERICA

The best available diplomatic and consular representation is needed in Latin-America rather than in the older capitals of Europe, where our relations are already well defined.

This declaration was made today by Victor M. Cutter, president of the United Fruit Company, before the Bond Club of Boston at the Chamber of Commerce.

"It is evident," he said, "that in order to maintain our prosperity we must take greater interest in widening our distribution and markets.

"The little countries around the Caribbean deserve our attention. They are not unimportant, because it is in this region that our diplomatic, business and banking policy will, if anywhere, find its waterloo.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

"Situated nearest to us politically and close to the Panama Canal, the key of our naval defense, the tropical republics of the Caribbean have the products we need, and they need those we possess. The closest economic ties between our country and theirs is inevitable.

"Our imports from Latin-America already exceed our exports, which would argue, to some extent at least, business perspicacity on the part of the Latin-Americans, as well as the potential wealth of their countries.

"This balance makes it certain that we must hustle for our share of their trade, that we must use all our manufacturing ability in turning out quality goods and all our merchandising skill if we are to learn the art of foreign trade, so familiar in the experienced European countries.

WATCH LOANS.

"As the world's most powerful creditor nation, we must make a comprehensive survey of the whole foreign investment field and particularly in the Caribbean. We must exercise the greatest care to insure permanently beneficial results from loans and industrial developments.

"There should be co-ordination as between our bankers engaged in foreign trade, as well as between its bankers and business men abroad, not for any sinister purpose, but to insure that bond salesmen eager to make a quick profit do not induce these countries to borrow more money than they require or than their economic conditions justify.

"The picture in the Caribbean has changed. There is no place for hit-and-run traders or bond salesmen, but there is an unparalleled opportunity for development of public utilities, great industrial and trading companies, and for sound investment of capital by capable and trustworthy bond and banking houses."

Idols Fa', Go Boom—Even Venus and Cleo Made Up

Chicago, April 2 (AP)—Even Venus was not above bleaching her hair. And Mohammed first introduced henna hair dye to the ancients. And Cleopatra had the first permanent wave by braiding her hair and placing it between hot stones.

Those peeps into the past of beauty culture were given the Chicago and Illinois Hair Dressers' Association convention by Emil Rhode, president of the organization.

Venus antedated Anita Loos by several centuries in the discovery that gentlemen prefer blondes, he said, even though all the beauties of Greece had dark hair, and she acted accordingly. But because peroxide was unknown in those days, she used a substance known as "quick lime."

As for Mohammed, he invented henna hair dye one day when he discovered several gray hairs in his beard, Rhode declared.

And the story about Cleopatra, he said, was vouched for by eminent Egyptologists.

ADAMS CASE A 'DELIBERATE MURDER'

Hartford, Ct., April 2 (AP)—Mrs. Olive S. Adams, widow of Harry Emerson Adams, formerly of Stoneham, Mass., United States weatherman here, is charged with "deliberate murder without legal provocation" by Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun in a finding filed in court.

The coroner points out that Mrs. Adams' action was not a defensive one, for her husband was helpless at the time. The woman acted not only with premeditation, but "persisted in that feeling all during the night and allowed no repentance or regret to alter her decision."

PARABASE

WHY PARABASE?

SCIENTISTS are agreed that the best motor oils come from crude oil containing paraffin. They speak of such motor oils as having a "paraffin base."

Socony Motor Oil has had a paraffin base—always. Motorists have discovered the superiority of Socony Motor Oil without being told the fact. More motorists in New York and New England buy Socony than buy any other brand.

We have coined the name Parabase to remind you that Socony Parabase Motor Oil is refined from the finest paraffin base crudes. By controlling every process in the manufacture of our oil, we know it is refined exactly to that point which gives your motor the protection it needs.

TIME TO CHANGE YOUR OIL

Have a Socony dealer drain off the old winter oil and flush your crankcase with Socony Flushing Oil. When he has poured in fresh Socony Parabase Motor Oil, start your motor and listen! The smooth, quiet operation of the moving parts means longer life for your car and a higher value when you come to trade it in.

BICKFORD GETS STAR ROLE IN GARBO FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.

NEW YORK, April 2—Charles Bickford, the red-haired Hollywood lad who has only lately joined the Hollywood colony, has been given the male role opposite Greta Garbo in "Anna Christie." Wonder if Jack Gilbert was disappointed. Jack is always ready to play the leading male role in real life and on the screen for Greta. 'Tis said that his art means nothing—that he will play a minor part just to be in a Garbo picture.

But Jack is not the type for "Anna Christie," and Bickford is; and Clarence Brown realized that as soon as he made a test for Bickford. Brown usually gets what he wants, for there are few directors who hit the bullseye with good pictures as frequently as Brown.

Bickford was probably all the world to the stage, but not so much in the movies until Cecil B. De Mille brought him to California to play the lead in "Dynamite." He is an unusual type, and now it seems as if he were fairly launched on the way to screen success.

I HAVE never known United Artists to get excited over assistant directors—so Thornton Freeland must be pretty good. Heretofore, Freeland has been Roland West's assistant on "The Bat," "The Dove" and "Alibi." He appears to have absorbed the West technique so thoroughly that now he is to be allowed to direct alone.

His first as a full-fledged director will be "Three Live Ghosts," by Max Marcin. Max, who used to be one of the every-day lunchers at the Montmartre, left Hollywood about a year ago to produce a play. Now they tell me he's back conferring with the United Artists' officials every day on his play, "Three Live Ghosts." Lots of playwrights are doing the same thing these days.

SAM HARRIS is going to Hollywood. He plans to find out what all these talkies are about, and he believes that the logical place to get educated along these lines is right in the heart of the movie industry. Harris may produce some of his own plays. He has a long list of stage successes, and he still retains the screen rights to some of them. He admits that he is greatly intrigued with the idea of converting his plays into talkies, and he will certainly find plenty of producers ready to listen to any ideas he may have to advance.

SNAPSHOTS of New York collected at random: D. W. Griffith bidding Joan Lowell, his new star, bon voyage as the lie de France sailed. Bert Lytell attending a Greenwich Village studio party and receiving plenty of attention from the fair sex. The Marx brothers playing their show to Jack Dempsey who was discovered in the audience and applauded.

Doris Kenyon Sills, Mrs Allison Quirk and Estelle Taylor Dempsey all arriving at a popular modiste's at the same time. Lupe Velez throwing kisses to the crowd who waited for her at the Rialto Theater. Lupe in a Hollywood creation, dancing at the New York Mayfair Club. Tullio Carminati dining at the Embassy Club. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

G. O. P. JOURNAL EDITORIAL HITS PROHIBITION

The New York Young Republican, official journal of the Young Republican Club, and of which Lauder W. Hodges of 49 Wall st. is editor, launches an editorial attack on prohibition, which may be perused with interest by party leaders at Washington.

The paper cites the views of millions of Americans and agrees with the expressed opinion of thousands of contestants in the Hearst $25,000 Temperance Prize Contest, when it says:

"We are profound believers in temperance. We are convinced, indeed, that it is the one common denominator for the so-called wets and the so-called dry.

MORE THAN ONE WAY

"But there is always more than one means to an end. And we feel very strongly that the mere existence of a law upon our statute books is not one of them. To be efficacious a law must be enforced. If the prohibition law can be enforced, more power to it. If it cannot be enforced, it becomes, we submit, just a futile gesture.

"After all the question resolves itself into a matter of ways and means. Prohibition is 'an experiment noble in purpose.' But temperance has passed far beyond the experimental stage. It is a definite and undeniable right which society may exact of any man.

"And society is certainly privileged to demand the best means to the end of obtaining it.

LAUGHING STOCK

"In our opinion those who deny this, or who defeat this, whether by fanatical adherence to an extreme measure which cannot be enforced or by blind refusal to recognize the need of any measure at all, are enemies of the social order."

M. H. COX, president of the Hollywood Industrial Co., Hollywood, Cal., and formerly head of the famous Murray's Roman Garden Restaurant in New York city says, America has been made the laughing stock of the world by the Volstead Act—the most inept law ever enacted in this country or any other. Before there is peace and contentment in the United States, we must forever end the prohibition law evils existing in every State in our land today.

Fight Broadcast Causes Mixup in Henhouse Price

Brockton, April 2—The story of a contract to build a henhouse, which was made while both parties were listening to a radio broadcast of the Dempsey-Tunney boxing match, was related in Superior Civil Court today.

David Cohen of East Bridgewater is attempting to recover $575 which he claims is the balance due on a $1500 henhouse erected for Max and Ida Bloom, also of East Bridgewater.

Cohen said all three were listening to the broadcast of the fight when the contract was made, and for that reason Mr. and Mrs. Bloom did not realize it was for $1500.

The Blooms, on the other hand, contended the contract was for $1100 and Cohen misunderstood the figure because of the broadcast.

SEEKS DEATH BY ROPE, POISON, GAS; LIVES

Holyoke, April 2—Trying to hang himself just as his 15-year-old sister had done a month ago, Frank Rydowski, 17, of Walnut st., failed in the attempt today and also failed to take his life by two other methods, before he gave up.

He put a rope around his neck and over a transom but the rope broke. He then turned on the gas but this only nauseated him and so he drank poison, which only burned him badly.

In his pain he ran to the telephone and called an operator, who notified the police. He was taken to city hospital where doctors said he would recover.

According to Dr. Stanley C. Cox, medical examiner, the boy said he was "sick of the world" and wanted to "see his sister," Stella, who hanged herself because she was out of work. hTe parents are dead but there are several older brothers and sisters.

AGNES FITZGERALD, 'MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL IN WORLD,' TO WED

Will Be Bride of Lowell Man, War Hero

AN announcement of much interest to Bostonians is the engagement of Miss Agnes Fitzgerald, beautiful daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, to Joseph Francis Gargen of Lowell and New York.

Miss Fitzgerald, once acclaimed by Sir Thomas Lipton as the "most beautiful girl in the world," is a sister of Mrs. Rose Kennedy, wife of Joseph T. Kennedy, motion picture producer, and is one of the most popular young women in the city.

She is a graduate of the Notre Dame Academy, Boston; Elmhurst College of Providence, and studied for a year and a half at the Sacred Heart College at Valiz, Netherlands.

She is a member of the Ace of Clubs and a past president of the Cecilian Guild, and has been active in charitable and religious work.

Gargen is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, and served in the World War with the Second Division as a captain of Marines. He was cited for gallantry and bravery, after leading the patrol in which Corp. Toth, the first Marine killed in the war, lost his life. After being wounded and rendered unfit for active duty, Capt. Gargen was assigned to the embassy staff of U. S. Ambassador Sharp and later to the embassy of Walter Hines Page in Italy.

After four years as diplomatic attache Capt. Gargen retired and went to China as representative of Kialan mining interests, the company with which President Hoover won fame as a mining engineer. He is now legal representative of the New York Railway Company, and the Fifth Avenue Motor Coach Company. The wedding will take place in May and the couple will make their home in New York City.

AGNES FITZGERALD
And her fiance, Capt. Joseph Francis Gargen of Lowell and New York. Their engagement has just been announced. Miss Fitzgerald is the daughter of former Mayor John Fitzgerald. Captain Gargen, World War veteran, who led a company of marines and was cited for bravery, is a mining engineer.

MASCULINE EYES MAY, this evening at the Vincent Club opening at the Plymouth Theater, gleam with appreciation of twinkling toes and fetching frocks on pretty girls. But the feminine portion of the audience, Eve-like in its love of adornment, will give its most rapturous admiration to the Fashion Parade. And from the beautiful bride to the smart miss in riding kit, each feminine in the audience can and will easily visualize herself in the role of model. They are a bewitching set, the models in the parade, fit to turn any head, masculine or feminine.

THERE IS MISS MARY Flagg, the stately bride, breath-taking in her beauty of bridal white. The modiste whose contribution to the parade is the bride gown well may be proud of her creation. Softest white satin, supple and shining, follows the wearer's slender lines from rounded chin far beyond satin-shod heels. The train is the gown itself, continued into the "morning glory" outline. But the glory of the creation is its gleaming diamond and bugle design that radiates the long, full sleeves, and gleams from the corsage. And makes the most entrancing of straps beneath its wearer's chin to hold in place the cap and veil.

SATELLITE TO THE BRIDE. Mrs. Daniel Frost Comstock precedes her into the spotlight's ray, a statuesque brunette in filmy willow chiffon falling into points and topped by the yard wide drooping chapeau always so conventionally perfect the bridesmaid's. Mrs. Comstock taking Mrs. Richard Storey's place in the Parade, is as radiantly dark as is Mrs. Storey glowingly blonde, and makes the happiest choice to accompany the brunet bride.

GIRL AFTER GIRL SWAYED into the spotlight, passed step by step down the stairs and so to her place in the ensemble, as dress rehearsal went its tiresome way in the Plymouth Theater last evening under Mr. Ford's benevolent direction. And this evening all is repeated—as radiant creatures like so many gorgeous peacocks sway and pose, the Madame Du Modiste's most astounding creations. So magnificent an outfit as Miss Rosamond Blanchard wore would sweep fatigue clear from the eye of even the most exhausted Vincent Club member.

MISS BLANCHARD WORE A beautiful white velvet evening wrap with sable cuffs and a chiffon gown of midnight black that glinted modishly at one shoulder in a shoestring strap. Another radiance in the ensemble was Mrs. Henry Bohlen's violet chiffon, an evening frock that billowed and swayed in graceful frothiness and had a frothy wrap of chiffon, not for warmth against spring's playful zephyrs, of course; merely for fashion's sake. And excellently did it serve fashion. Mrs. Charles Greenough, in crisp black taffeta designed in bugles, gave her blonde emphasis to an evening gown of the more formal mode.

A VERY BREATH OF spring, Miss Agnes Boardman was the essence of sophistication allied to girlishness, in printed chiffon that blended the princess and the bouffant and had for 1929's individual touch a ruffled cape that is the newest evolution of the cocktail jacket. Rose tints and soft purples and a suggestion of orchid tinged their colors, and opened the Fashion Parade most successfully. Nothing so radiant as the color of Mrs. Henry Shaw Rogerson's red velvet evening cape ever was seen in the most colorful sunset. It caught every ray of the spotlight, and matched its flaming red to the enormous poppy caught at the waist of her black gown.

A LEOPARD COAT WITH collar and cuffs of golden fox brought Miss Virginia Curtin into the Fashion Parade with the most eye satisfying of results. Miss Edith Wolcott will this evening wear a rosy tinted taffeta, a dinner gown so perfectly of the mode as to be a little bit ahead of it, with its sweeping taillike train, its princess outline and its low hung ruches for panniers. Informality and the boudoir, or smartness and the Lido, either or both, would properly be the background for the brightly tinted pajamas Miss Cora Lyman wore. Her curly head rose prettily from their gay colorings and intricate embroideries.

SATISFYING AS IS THE Fashion Parade, the Vincent Club 1929 melange will otherwise delight its adoring public. How could it be otherwise, when there is a Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane to sing delightfully and dance divinely, and a Braggiotti duo to tap dance and otherwise lend Terpsichorean grace; a Mrs. Morgan Butler with silvery soprano, a Mrs. John E. Thayer to be the man of the cast, and a sweet voiced young matron like Mrs. Frederick Bradlee to sit aloft in Spanish isolation and warble of her love to dark browed adorer below. And then the chorus. The girls who tap dance "A Step to Heaven." The bevy of beauties in crisp taffetas and enormous hats who light the way of "If Not, Why Not." Truly the Vincent Varieties are rich in their variety of feminine charm and skill.

AND 1929'S SHOW LIKELY will go down in the club's golden annals as perhaps the most imposing, the most carefully conched: the most beautifully costumed and the most dollar garnering one of them all. Due credit for success should go to rest on the shoulders of Mrs. Chauncy Nash, of Mrs. Charles Coolidge, of Miss Helen Moseley, of Miss Dorothy Lawrence and Miss Harriet Morse, some of the "behind the scenes" corps that helps make the performance move with professional rapidity and smoothness. Applause will be long and frequent this evening, and for every afternoon and evening the "Varieties" hold the Plymouth stage this week. And all in Sweet Charity's cause.

MATERNITY BILL FIGHT LOOMS

Washington, April 2 (AP)—An effort to obtain consideration by Congress of legislation designed to continue the provisions of the Sheppard-Towner maternity and infancy act will be made in the special session if subjects other than farm relief and tariff are introduced.

Twenty national organizations sponsoring continuation of the maternity act provisions which expire on July 1, agree they will not attempt to have new legislation introduced if the special session is devoted solely to the two major issues.

For nearly seven years the government has co-operated with states in a joint campaign of education to reduce the death rate of mothers and babies. The Sheppard-Towner act authorized annual appropriations of $1,240,000 for promoting maternal and infant welfare.

All but three states, Connecticut, Illinois and Massachusetts, have accepted the provisions and made appropriations.

F. W. Murnau and Janet Gaynor,

Fox Director and Star, find that smooth skin always touches the heart . .

The cruelest test a skin can meet is the close-up. In the glare of the incandescent "sunspot" lights, a star's skin must show exquisitely smooth. That is why nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap.

JANET GAYNOR, winsome Fox star, in the bathroom—one of the most charming seen in Hollywood—which sets off so well her flower-like beauty.

"THERE'S a caressing quality to Lux Toilet Soap that I have never found before except in finest French soaps—my skin feels so soft and smooth."

Janet Gaynor

ESTHER RALSTON, popular Paramount star, says: "In their close-ups stars are more closely observed than women in any other profession. Their popularity largely depends on the beauty of their skin. Lux Toilet Soap is excellent for keeping skin delightfully smooth."

MARY ASTOR, lovely Fox star, says: "A smooth skin is one of the most important assets a screen star has. Like every woman, I have to guard my skin. I always use Lux Toilet Soap—a lovely soap."

Nine out of ten screen stars use this soap for smooth skin

LOVELY SKIN, fresh and smooth—it is the very essence of that flower-like beauty the world finds so appealing! Every girl knows how greatly her power to charm depends on the clear smoothness of her skin.

In Hollywood, stars and directors alike know this so well! "People respond instantly to the loveliness of beautiful skin," says F. W. Murnau, Fox director—and sums up the experience of 39 leading directors.

"Every screen star knows this," he goes on to say, forcefully. "They take the utmost care of their skin. For in the close-up only the skin of naturally flawless beauty can stand the pitiless search of glaring lights."

Janet Gaynor knows so well how important a part lovely skin plays in her success on the screen—she is one of the host of adored screen stars who keep their skin exquisite with Lux Toilet Soap.

Of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 use this daintily fragrant white soap. They like its gentle care of their skin—its generous lather, too. All the great film studios have made it the official soap in their dressing rooms.

'I KILLED HER BY ACCIDENT!' SAYS RAID SLAYER

Aurora, Ill., April 2 (INS)—Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith, who shot and killed Mrs. Lillian DeKing, during a liquor raid on her home, on the witness stand at the official inquest here today claimed he shot her by accident.

"She had a pistol levelled at me," he said. "I backed up to get out of range and somehow, I don't know, it isn't very clear to me, my shotgun went off.

"After that nothing was clear. I heard another shot and I felt a sting in my leg. I saw the little boy on the floor with a revolver in his hand."

Smith's story was told to the jury of six men from his cot in a hospital, where he is recovering from the bullet wound inflicted by Gerald DeKing, 12, son of the slain woman. Coroner Viercke presided.

"Treadwell and Anderson, two deputies, told me that night to get a bullet-proof vest and get a shotgun and go with them. I didn't know where we were going," Smith testified.

"They told me Joe De King was causing trouble," Smith said. "They said they had a warrant to search the house, but I never saw any. We got inside and I saw the boy. Then from a door I saw Joe with two guns in his hand.

"He said the first man to come in that room would be killed. I didn't want to shoot him, so I brought the best thing to do would be to hit him over the head. I did and he dropped.

"I turned and saw Mrs. De King lvancing from the other side of the room. She had a gun in her hand and was cursing me. I scrambled back to get out of the room and the gun went off. I didn't shoot on purpose."

"Where to Buy It"

You know many products well and favorably by their trade marks or names. Where one of these is concerned you are already "sold." All you need to know is "where to buy it."

More and more, those who offer merchandise or service are making use of Classified Telephone Directories for this purpose.

There you may find their trade marks and a concise statement of what each stands for, coupled with the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of local dealers ready to serve.

These trade marks are not subordinated to general commodity headings.

Each appears in alphabetical order as a main business heading of its own.

Thus a list of dealers is quickly and easily found.

Trade mark headings are a direct aid to buying of advertised and established merchandise or service. Many lines of trade marked goods are now represented in our Classified Telephone Directories.

CUPID OUTWITS LAW IN 'SOUL MATE' RAID

Cupid today outwitted the law and a rejected suitor when John F. McLaughlin, 55, Lynn business man, and Josephine Neebryzdowska told Judge Ralph W. Reeve in Lynn court that they had wed since their arrest in an apartment on High st. early Sunday morning.

At the time of the raid, which was led by Jan Waselewski, the girl's former suitor, the arrested couple insisted they were "soul mates."

Judge Reeve was informed they were married by Clerk of Court John L. Barry, with a policeman as witness, and as a result the charges were filed. Waselewski was told that he would have to take civil action to recover $1650 he said he gave the girl.

NEW ENGLAND WOMAN'S CLUB

The grandchildren of the late President Woodrow Wilson were treated to a ride on the back of an elephant sent for them by the King of Siam when they visited Bangkok with their parents, Prof. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre. This was one of the many courtesies extended to Prof. Sayre when he headed the commission sent by the United States Government to study the Siam treaty situation, following the World War, Prof. Sayre told the New England Women's Club.

He spoke upon the international relations of Siam with the United States, Great Britain and Italy, and concluded with a word picture of Bangkok and its people.

"When we arrived we saw all kinds of western things, such as street cars automobiles, telephones, modern hospitals. On the surface Bangkok looked as if it was slowly becoming westernized, but a few weeks spent in cultivating the friendship of her statesmen completely revolutionized our first impressions. We perceived that this was only external; the Siamese still cling to their ancient civilization and customs of such graciousness that we felt crude in their presence."

QUINCY FEDERATION

"Women who say they do not wish to serve as club presidents because they cannot stand the criticism are conjuring up something with no more foundation than a fear of the dark," Mrs. Boyd F. Bowles told the Quincy City Federation of Women's Clubs at its annual luncheon meeting in Bethany church. The 200 delegates were later entertained by the Wollaston Woman's Club with a comedy play.

"Most of the criticism club presidents get is kindly," she said, "and for every adverse comment she will have 500 compliments, besides the joy of knowing that the membership looks up to her with faith and loyalty as their leader."

Mrs. W. N. Blaisdell, president, presided, and Mrs. Carl L. Watson, president of Boston City Federation, was honor guest. Miss Gwendolyn Albee gave an illustrated lecture on the work of the Florence Crittenton League.

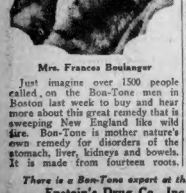
Bon-Tone Relieves Stomach Trouble of Six Years' Duration
Gas Pressing Around Heart Caused Palpitation



Mrs. Frances Boulanger

Just imagine over 1500 people called on the Bon-Tone men in Boston last week to buy and hear more about this great remedy that is sweeping New England like wild fire. Bon-Tone is mother nature's own remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is made from fourteen roots, leaves, barks and berries and does not contain any acids or anything inimical to the most delicate system.

"My stomach has troubled me for about six years," states Mrs. Frances Boulanger, 107 Somerville St., Manchester, N. H. "My food would form gas that would bloat me and sometimes press near my heart causing it to palpitate and make me short of breath. I often would have dizzy spells and I felt tired and listless all the time with no ambition at all and my housework was a burden and it seemed like a big job to get the children ready for school. On a visit to my mother, Mrs. Saulinier of Hillsdale Ave., Haverhill, Mass., I found her looking ten years younger and feeling fine and she told me Bon-Tone did it, so I decided to try it, too. The very first bottle gave me relief and now my stomach is in first class condition and doesn't give me the least bit of trouble, but digests my food perfectly. No more bloating or dizzy spells. I have lost that tired, draggy feeling and my housework is a pleasure now. I feel better in every way—thanks to Bon-Tone. It certainly does deserve the highest praise."

There is a Bon-Tone expert at the following Boston Drug Stores:

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

A deluge sweeps over the civilized world. Martin Webster, a lawyer, saves his wife, Helen, and two children in the flood, but is cut off from them by the waters. He thinks they must be dead. Claire Arlington, young and beautiful wife of a middle-aged invalid, also escapes death, and, swimming to a bit of land, runs across Jephson and Norwood, derelicts like herself. She overhears them fighting over her.

CHAPTER 2

THE following morning Claire and Norwood started early, intending to do their work of salvage before crossing the channel, which they could do only when the tide was at its lowest, some hours ahead.

They separated, and Claire sat down to rest.

And then Norwood's arm fell come round her neck and his kisses were on her mouth.

She wrenched herself loose, snatched up a piece of wood and brought it down on his face with the force of desperation. The next moment he had loosed her with a curse.

She recrossed the island in advance of Norwood and swam the channel while the water was still high, so that, as he could not swim, it was some hours before he could follow.

At the cliff she discarded her clothes, throwing them aside as things of no further value. The waves broke below her and she dived to meet them.

She swam straight out from the land. She raised herself from time to time to search for any sign of land above the rising waters. . . .

Now there was a chill of fear in her heart, but she forced it down and would not heed it.

She could still float for many hours, and the land might show at any moment.

"This is how people drown," she thought, "and are too tired to know when death takes them," but she swam on.

The later summer came, and Martin was still alone. He had made his headquarters in a tunnel in which was a hand car on rails and a hut. The place was dark and offered shelter, and he began a regular course of collection and storage.

He was shocked one day to find nearby a body of a handsome young woman.

He heard voices on the other side of the hedge against which he was sitting. The voices were rough and surly. He could not understand all they said, but it was plain that they had killed the young

[illegible]

Martin, being troubled, wandered to the sea.

Something moved—was it a bird?—on the water. Far out—for his sight was keen—he saw it. It was like the arm of a human swimmer; the arm of one who swam slowly and very low in the water.

And while he wondered, and very slowly, at little more than the tide's pace, the swimmer came on.

With a sudden amazement, and with an underthought of excitement, Martin realized that she was a woman. A wild thought came that it might be Helen who had returned, and then a pang of sorrow that it was not she.

She came up from the water in the evening light, walking unsteadily as one in the last stage of exhaustion, and suddenly threw up her arms with a sound that was between laughter and a cry of exaltation, and fell forward on the turf.

He saw a woman beautiful of face and form.

She looked at him without fear, but her glance was alert and doubtful.

She saw a man who was still young, though he had been younger. He was lean and straight, but not tall; somewhat taller than herself, perhaps, but looking shorter in the rough soiled clothes which he was wearing. He was bronzed

Police Drive on Hardware Stores Selling Alcohol

VIOLATORS TO LOSE LICENSE

Boston police today started a drive on hardware dealers who have been selling wood and denatured alcohol indiscriminately.

As a result of Health Commissioner Francis X. Mahoney's suggestion, a general order was sent to all police captains, instructing them to notify hardware dealers that they must obey the law scrupulously.

The general order instructed captains to furnish reports, not only of firms against which court action has been taken, but also of those concerning which they have evidence of misconduct.

The health commissioner stated that such firms will be refused renewals of their licenses on April 30.

MANY ABUSES

Commissioner Wilson received a letter from Health Commissioner Mahoney in regard to renewals of licenses to dealers in denatured alcohol and wood alcohol, and this was followed by a conference between the two officials.

Commissioner Mahoney said that abuses could be eliminated by refusal to grant licenses, and he believed it fair to ask police captains to furnish names of any firm they considered unfit to have licenses renewed.

Commissioner Wilson and Superintendent Crowley sent out Commissioner Mahoney's letter to the captains and added,

"Division commanders should take notice of the above letter and send reports in duplicate to the superintendent's office with reference to any persons who have violated up to the conditions of their permits."

MANY POISONED

The dealers pay only $1 a year for permits to sell denatured and wood alcohol, and according to the authorities hundreds of cases are treated each year in hospitals of men who have consumed these products. This despite the fact that the law says the poison alcohol shall not be sold to anyone without reasonable investigation, and at no time to anyone who might be thought to purchase for beverage purposes.

Each division commander is expected to have a general report in by tomorrow morning, and specific reports on individual firms will follow.

URGES $100,000 GATEWAY

Construction of a $100,000 semi-circular gateway, panelled with sculptured scenes of early American and colonial history, was urged by Representative Clarence S. Luitwieler of Newton today in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Luitwieler voiced his idea before the House ways and means committee. The recommendation of the special tercentenary committee for mural paintings to cost $30,000 and a $25,000 road in Concord he said, indicated that the commission failed to realize the importance of the occasion. The Concord road, he pointed out, merely figured in the Revolution and has no connection with the coming celebration.

Plead Guilty of Running Big Still

Arraignment in Federal court of George Santelo and Louis Gregorio, both of East Boston, on charges of manufacturing liquor, disclosed the seizure of a 1,500-gallon still today on Kembel st., Roxbury. The defendants pleaded guilty and were held in bail of $2500 each by U. S. Commissioner E. C. Jenney for disposition before the U. S. District Court.

Mabel Normand on Road to Recovery

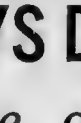
Beverly Hills, Cal., April 2 (INS) —Mabel Normand, screen actress, today was safely past the crisis in her battle against tuberculosis, her physician, Dr. F. G. Fishbaugh, announced.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Do you think a girl can live on $15.65 per week, the new minimum wage set for hod and shoe workers by the minimum wage commission?



ANNA NEE, 10 Baxter st., South Boston, mill worker—I don't believe that the average girl today can live on the amount established by the commission and still be able, at the same time, to have decent wearing apparel. These days, when young girls like to look neat, attend a dance once or twice a week, and at the same time be able to help out their parents a little, it amount to well over the $14.65 wages allowed.

EDWARD CONRON, 19 Winslow st., Roxbury, truck driver—The girls nowadays that work for small wages in mills like to look as neat as the ones that are working in offices or whatever their occupation may be. That privileges of course, cannot be denied them. Every girl likes to have nice clothing and in order to accomplish the same they must have a fairly decent salary. The price of clothing is high and trying to uphold a social standing in a community is rather costly so how can a small salary as that mentioned be o any great help to a shoe factory worker?

MISS LILLIAN LYNCH, 20 Reed st., Roxbury, mill worker—I think that a young girl could get along on the wage set by the commission. It would not be so difficult if she established for herself a budget plan where she could map out her plans in regards to getting wearing-apparel from time to time and be little more economical in her purchases. Through this medium one ought to be able to get along comfortably.

FRANCES HENNESSEY, Albany st., Dorchester, stenographer —A girl receiving $14.65 per week and paying her board at home would have a mighty hard time to get along in my opinion. There are several things a girl must get from week to week, such as a pair of stockings, shoes, or whatever it might be in the line of wearing apparel. When her board is paid what has she left? And a girl that lives away from home would have to be considered out of the question entirely. She would not be able to pay even her board and room not mentioning anything else.

Identification Lands Him in Law's Toils

When George Flaherty, 18, of Second st., South Boston, used the registration certificate of a stolen car to identify himself to the credit department of a jewelry store, it brought trouble down upon his head.

According to evidence in municipal court today, Flaherty was arrested after the jewelry store manager telephoned to the automobile's real owner and discovered the car had been stolen. He pleaded not guilty to auto theft and was held in $2000.

200 Methodists at Brockton Conference

"Williams Boys" of '65 to '90 to Meet

The "boys" of the old Williams school will hold their 29th annual reunion next Tuesday night at the Chamber of Commerce. Organized as the "Old Williams School-Boys' Association," the group includes Williams school graduates of 1865 to 1890.

FIND SLAIN MAN'S WIFE NEAR DEAD

Calais, Me., April 2—Weak, sick, and with her feet frozen, Mrs. Lena Graham who vanished Saturday just before her husband, Fred, was discovered shot dead in bed, was found in a Milltown (N. B.) barn today.

The barn is on the farm of Benjamin Meyers in Boundary st., less than a mile from the Milltown home she fled while clad only in a nightgown, fur coat and overshoes.

When she was found, half buried in hay, the overshoes were missing. Her frozen, blood stained feet were wrapped in an old coat she found in the barn.

Arthur Hiltz of Milltown and Meyer found the woman after Meyer had told Hiltz he suspected there was someone hiding in the barn.

The men took an electric torch, searched and finally discovered Mrs. Graham in the haymow. She asked weakly for a drink of water, then said:

"Send for my daddy, Mr. Stickney, and tell Fred to come home from the mill at once."

Fred Graham was buried yesterday, however, with military honors. He was a Canadian war veteran. Mrs. Graham was sent to a hospital in St. Stephen.

DOPE WAR LAUDED BY DRUGGIST

Los Angeles, Cal., April 2—Curtailment of traffic in dope by limiting manufacture to the actual needs of reputable physicians and hospitals is suggested as a remedy for a rapidly growing evil by Edward H. Charette of Stockton, who is a pharmacist of more than 40 years' experience.

Charette's views are set out in the following letter to William Randolph Hearst:

"Hon. William Randolph Hearst, San Simeon, Calif.

"My dear Mr. Hearst:

"I was much interested in a letter published in the San Francisco Examiner from Warden John W. Snook of the Atlanta penitentiary giving his views on the narcotic evil and the benefits of the Porter bill in caring for the unfortunate addicts.

APPROVES WARDEN'S VIEW

"May I add my approval to Warden Snook's views and express my own as a pharmacist of 40 odd years' standing? 'During my early career in a drug store at the end of Grant ave. and Morton alley, S. F., I was kept busy most of the day folding little packets of cocaine to retail for 10 cents and morphine powders in similar size. The owners of this store were made wealthy in this nefarious business.

"The traffic in this promiscuous peddling in narcotics in those early days has remained a terrible example of the degradation humanity can reach if given a free rein. While the habit has grown by leaps and bounds in recent years and more especially since prohibition has become a law, I really believe the Government of the United States is tackling this evil the wrong way, the true remedy is prevention.

HALT MANUFACTURE

"Stop the manufacturing by the cold blooded chemical houses. What does the public know about the thousands of tons of narcotics these houses produce each year? Most all narcotics are transported to Europe and then smuggled back into this country to be handled by the big fry in the narcotic peddling game.

"Let us hope our Mr. Herbert Hoover will find a way of so curtailing the manufacturing of narcotics as to cover only the actual use by physicians and reputable hospitals. This is the only remedy.

"Your very truly,
"Edward H. Charette."

Otto Von Porat Bars Cupid as He Seeks Ring Title

WILL WED WHEN HE RETIRES

Giant Norwegian Here for Tussle With Risko at the Garden

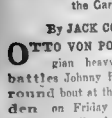
By JACK CONWAY

OTTO VON PORAT, Norwegian heavyweight who battles Johnny Risko in a 10-round bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night, found time to talk about love and marriage between rounds of a strenuous workout at Kelley & Hayes' Gym.

"I have not any sweethearts," said Von Porat, "and will not consider getting married until after I have won the heavyweight championship of the world.

"Some day I want a home of my own. But for the present I won't permit myself to think of love as I intend to devote all of my time and thought to winning the championship.

"When I retire as a boxer in four or five years time, I intend to get married. I hope my marriage will be blessed by children. With my career as a boxer behind me, I shall be able to devote much of my time to my home life.



Jack Conway

"I admit I am taking a page from Gene Tunney's book. The former champion always said he would never marry until after he retired. He kept his word. I shall do likewise."

Von Porat's mother is living in Norway with two of her sons. Another son and Otto live in Chicago.

"I came to the United States three years ago," said Otto. "I own a great deal to this country, as it furnished me with the opportunity to become a heavyweight contender. Everybody has been very kind to me. Since coming to Boston, I have made many new friends. I met quite a number of Boston boys while I was representing Norway in the Olympic games in 1924."

THERE wasn't anybody to box with Von Porat. The local heavyweights had read about Otto's famous right hand punch and had run to cover. So his shadow boxed, socked away at the heavy and light bags and skipped rope.

"I am six feet three inches tall," declared the Norwegian. "I now weigh 198 pounds. I am known as a right hand puncher, but I also hit pretty well with my left.

"A right hand alone never gets a boxer anywhere. One must have a left hand to get into position from which to score with the right hand belt.

"I engaged in some 40 amateur bouts before coming to the United States. While in this country, I have had 22 pro battles. My recent victory over Tom Heeney was my best ring feat.

"I intend to give everything I have in the fighting line during the four or five years I remain in the ring. I believe the public will appreciate a little action, especially some heavy right hand punching."

ASKED if he had ever seen Risko in action, Von Porat expressed himself as follows:

"I was at the ringside the night Max Schmeling knocked Risko out in New York. Risko pulled back his left hand to score with a hook and the German nailed him on the chin. Schmeling is a sweet puncher, but I think I can hit equally as hard.

"Paulino gave me one of my toughest fights. The Basque got the decision, but in the tenth round I almost dropped him when I landed with two healthy right hand swings to the chin."

VON PORAT speaks very good English. Chick Hayes, who met the Norwegian when he first arrived in this country at Portland, said Otto could speak English fluently even then.

Barney Furey, old-time trainer of Sam Langford and Jack Johnson, is here in charge of Von Porat.

A pretty good looking middleweight by the name of Hanson is also along with Von Porat.

Jim Mullins, Chicago boxing promoter, will arrive in town Friday to see the battle.

Johnny Risko worked out at Jim Foland's Gym and is confident he will upset the plans of Von Porat.

The game will bring together the "Florida" and "Michigan" divisions of the Harvard spring football squad.

The game has been scheduled for 3 o'clock and will take place in the rear of the Harvard business school on North Harvard st, in Brighton. The field will be roped off but the general public will be admitted free of charge.

Okeson arrived here early this morning and assigned four of the best officials in this part of the country to handle the game. Dr. Eddie O'Brien of Tufts will referee the battle with Dan Kelly of Springfield, Tom McCabe of Holy Cross and Bill Halloran of Providence as assistants.

The two Harvard elevens are evenly matched and a real battle should ensue. The "Florida" aggregation, coached by Charley Hubbard, won the first skirmish by the score of 6 to 0 and Eddie Casey's "Michigan" team has a revenge battle on its hands.

PORTSMOUTH FIVE LOSES IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Apr. 2 (INS)—By staging a brisk rally in the closing minutes of the battle, Raton, N. M., nosed out Portsmouth, N. H., 24 to 23, in the opening game of the eleventh annual national interscholastic basketball tournament today. The game was desperately fought throughout and half time saw the easterners in front, 11 to 10.

Sameson, Portsmouth center, missed a chance to tie the count in the last 30 seconds of play, when he was fouled. He missed the free throw.

The midget five from the southwest went out in front at the start to hold an 8 to 5 lead at the half but in the second quarter, Howell, new Raton forward, began to locate the basket and sent his team ahead, 11 to 10 at the half. Ferrini, Portsmouth running guard, got the range in the third period and the Easterners held a three-point advantage at the end of the third quarter.

With two minutes to play the Portsmouth five was leading, 23 to 19. Kreuger went under the basket for a goal. He was fouled by Usher and added a point with the free throw. A minute later he connected from the side for what proved to be the winning goal.

Harvard Ball Squad Cut for Trip South

By TED LYNCH

Coach Fred Mitchell of the Harvard varsity ball nine today selected 19 Crimson ball players for the trip South next week.

This final slash in the large Crimson ball squad reduces the makeup of the present varsity nine to six pitchers, three catchers, five infielders and five outfielders.

This small squad will face the ordeal of facing Boston University, William and Mary, Richmond, Quantico Marines, Georgetown, Catholic University and Columbia in a stretch of eight days.

Those comprising the present team include:

SEXTET OF PITCHERS

Pitchers—Eddie Colpak, Dick Ketchum, Ernie Mollroy, Lefty Pace, Red McHale and Howie Whitmore.

Catchers—Jim Dudley, Tommy Gilligan and Sam Batchelder.

Infielders—Johnny Carver, Captain Everett Donaghy, Eddie McGrath, Frankie Nugent and Johnny Prior.

Outfielders — Benny Bassett, Ralph Durkee, Ben Ticknor, Pete Todd and Al Whitney.

Mitchell was forced to limit his squad to 19 instead of the squad of 22 players as in previous years. This new ruling doubtless cost Bob Gilmor, Tommy O'Neil, Huck Huxtable and Ken Crotty trips South during the coming spring vacation

GET CHANCE LATER

However, this unfortunate quartette will return to the varsity ranks when the team returns from the South.

Coach Fred Mitchell, Trainer Fadden, Manager Hardy and two assistants will be in charge of the Southern tour. Malcolm Freeman has been picked as one of the assistant managers, with the other choice coming later in the week.

The cut was expected, although some of the selections came as a surprise. Bob Gilmor was quite a hurler on the freshman nine last year and only a fine showing by Eddie Colpak, a senior, robbed him of a long train ride.

Ken Crotty was not picked for the outfield. Crotty has quite a reputation as a ball player in the middle of the State and those who have watched his play during the summer months will be surprised when they learn that such untried ball players as Ben Ticknor, Pete Todd and Ralph Durkee beat him out for a Pullman ticket.

'Lena's' Severity May Wreck White Sox

Dallas, Tex., April 2 (AP)—Revolution has broken out in the ranks of the White Sox because of the training methods and disciplinary measures enforced by Manager "Lena" Blackburne.

Blackburn, the rebels charged, had wounded their pride by "snooping" on their actions off the diamond. Furthermore, they said the team was not being run right and that they were forced to play fourth rate teams on precarious diamonds without any possibility of learning any baseball.

Despite recent warnings from the Chicago headquarters and his three-day benching and the loss of his captaincy for breaking a training rule, Art Shires, rookie first baseman, dictated a statement in which he gave vent to his feelings

"I didn't want to come to this club in the first place," the Texan said. "And I didn't ask them for the captaincy. If they don't want me to play first base for them, all right, too. If they don't want me on their squad, all right again, let them trade me or send me back to the minors, there are plenty clubs that can use me."

Backburne said he was running the club and that he intends to enforce the training rules.

Bill Cissell, who cost the White Sox $123,000 in 1927, was another who openly admitted his dissatisfaction. Cissell, like Shires, was benched for breaking rules

Boucher Voted Best Sportsman on Ice

Montreal, April 2 (AP)—Frank Boucher, stellar center of the New York Rangers, has repeated last season's performance of winning the Lady Byng trophy, awarded each year to the player in the National Hockey League who combined skill and sportsmanship to the greatest degree. The award is made by a jury of sports writers from the various cities in which the league operates.

Boucher won this season by a big margin over the next candidate, Harold Darragh of Pittsburgh. Next in order were George Hay, Detroit; Harry Oliver, Boston; Carson Cooper, Detroit; Frank Nighbor, Ottawa; winner in the 1926-27 and 1928-29 season, and Jimmy Ward, Montreal Maroons.

Paul Waner Still Wants More Money

Pittsburgh, April 2 (AP)—The Post Gazette today prints a telegram from Paul Waner, Pirate holdout outfielder, quoting Waner as saying he had cut his salary demand slightly and that while he regretted being absent from the team, the club would have to meet his latest demand. Waner also admitted, the paper says, exchanging telegrams with Barney Dreyfuss looking to an adjustment of the differences.

Two Drop Out of Bunion Derby Grind

Trenton, N. J., April 3—The Bunion Derby parade left here this morning on the third leg of the Coast-to-Coast race, with the roster lessened by two, Louis Perella of New York and Mario Trapp of Kansas, who dropped out.

Cools of Belgium was leading by a slight margin in elapsed time at the start of today's run.

All Stars Lose

Speedonians ended their season by defeating Jamaica All-Stars, 37 to 28, at the Jamaica Neighborhood Gets led the scoring with 11 points.

TIGERS PICKED TO WIN CUP

Boston Tigers, favorites in the Can-Am final series as a result of their 11-6 win over the Reds in the second game of the cup play, meet Providence Reds in the third game of the Can-Am cup series in Boston Arena tomorrow night.

Indications are the largest crowd of the season will see the game. The Tigers made many new friends by the spectacular hockey they played Saturday and Monday in beating the Reds.

Several hundred fans from Providence already have made reservations.

Tigers are strong favorites to clean up the series in straight games but the Rhode Island fans and the Reds themselves are confident that the Boston entry is not unbeatable even on its own ice surface.

Tigers hold a different opinion on this matter and will seek to snow the Reds under and establish definite superiority.

The advance sale at the Arena box office and down town sporting goods store is heavy, but several hundred tickets will be set aside to care for those who customarily come to the Arena at the last minute.

Two thousand admission tickets also will be placed on sale at 7 o'clock.

Dempsey Bids for Detroit Arena

New York, April 2 (AP)—The firm of Jack Dempsey and Humbert Fugazy, boxing promoters, hopes to extend its activities to purchase of the Olympic arena there.

The former champion left for Detroit last night with authority to purchase the plant and Fugazy intimated that they were ready to spend $1,000,000 on it.

Heilman Reforms; Back in Game Again

Beaumont, Tex., April 2 (INS)—Harry Heilman's probation on the bench has ended. The erstwhile "Iron Man" of the Tigers is back in the game.

He played first base yesterday against the Chicago Cubs and he will be in there again today. The big fellow handles himself well and went about his job in an energetic and earnest fashion.

Art French Probable Harvard Frosh Eleven Coach

'28 LEADER LIKELY TO TAKE JOB

French Would Take Job of Eddie Casey, Candidate for Head Coach in '30

By TED LYNCH

Although Coach Arnold Horween will not pick his football assistants until later in the week, indications point to Arthur French, last year's varsity leader, as the next Harvard freshman football coach.

Harvard athletic officials will not comment on this report but the Crimson officials have taken that attitude on other sure-thing appointments.

French, now a student at the college, refuses to make a statement but at the same time makes no denial.

Eddie Casey, who has turned out three undefeated freshman teams, is likely to report next fall to the varsity staff where he will act as backfield coach to the last Horween eleven.

It was reported three months ago that Horween positively was through after this year and which is more important, that his successor would come from his new staff.

CASEY IN LINE

Casey is the logical man to take up the reins, and Casey, as a member of the varsity staff, will be in position to become head coach.

This would leave the freshman post open. French undoubtedly is the choice of Coach Horween for the berth. French was one of the best football captains Harvard has ever had.

French is a born leader as his college record shows. In his freshman year, he was president of his class and also leader of the football team.

In his sophomore year he again was elected president of his class and played leading roles on the football and track teams.

FRENCH HONORED

Last year he resigned his class office in favor of Tim Clark, but this year, his last at Harvard, he was elected to the post of first marshal, the highest class post any senior can obtain, and he led a football team which licked Yale.

Three weeks ago, when Casey was first mentioned as a member of the varsity coaching staff, French, Rufe Bond and Joe Hartley were regarded as the leading lights for the yearling post.

The rest of the Harvard coaching staff remains a matter of doubt. It is expected that Charley Hubbard and Duke Dunne, line coaches, and Eddy Clark, center coach, will remain.

Leo Leary, Joe Hartley and Eddie Bradford are mentioned for the end coach's post. Horween and Casey will take care of the backfield. Vic Kennard will once again handle the kickers.

St. Joseph's T. A. S., famous West End organization, will hold another all-novice amateur tournament in Commercial Hall, Bowdoin sq., on Saturday night.

The all-novice shows of the St. Joe's have been the hit of the amateur season. They have introduced scores of new faces, have produced furious slugging matches and have helped to develop the beginners in the boxing game. The shows have been so successful that, for the third time, Father Bill Cuddy will confine the journey to novices.

Bouts will be held in the 112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight divisions, and entries may be forwarded to William H. Cuddy, 333 Washington st., room 515.

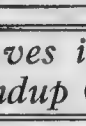
Miami, Fla., April 2—Our Braves bid a year's farewell to Florida tonight.

After six weeks of almost uninterrupted sunshine, the athletes will take their grips and uniforms and start north toward the serious business of one more season.

A final fling at the Dodgers this p. m. was the baseball finale. With the exception of one game with the Athletics at Richmond, there will be no more big league stuff until the team gets home to play a couple with the Red Sox.



Nick Flatley

The boys are ready to depart in a much better frame of mind than could have been possible not so long since. Something of real team spirit has developed the tribe. The boys who were groaning about the hundredth drill or just another campaign are beginning to figure on going places in the race.

Even the strategists, who were chronic pessimists a week ago, can see a chance for sunshine ahead. The strategists, three—Judge Fuchs, Johnny Evers, and Hank Gowdy—are willing to express hope and future glory for the team. They were just the other way the last few days at St. Pete.

Here is how they see things this shining Florida day:

FUCHS LIKES TEAM

Judge Fuchs—"I think this is the best Braves team that ever came up from Florida since I've been connected with the club. I know that isn't claiming a pennant, but, just the same, I'm sure we're on the way up. A lot of the boys figured us to cause trouble a year or two ago. We didn't, but that makes no difference.

"For my part, I think this 1920 bunch form a much better baseball team than we had a year ago. It has its weak points, but we'll try to fix those.

"And except for a couple of places, I think we have a mighty good club, with plenty of reserve strength, which we've never had before.

"I believe and hope that these Braves will give the Boston fans some very pleasant surprises."

SPIRIT GOOD—EVERS

Johnny Evers—"Notice the pepper on the bench these days? And do you hear the gang crab when they lose one? That shows you the old spirit is there.

"The boys are beginning to think they can play ball, and when they feel that way they will win a lot of games.

"Some of the boys that looked like busts at the start are right up there now. Getting better each day. This isn't a great ball club yet but it has plenty of makings. Maybe we'll surprise the league."

CLUB IN RACE—GOWDY

Hank Gowdy—"Don't let anybody tell you that this club may not get into that race. It looks to me like a team that can do almost anything if it escapes accidents.

"We have plenty of defense, and more pitching than I've ever seen on a Boston club in the spring and a defensive ball club can stay in the first division any time it gets the breaks.

"This club has a chance."

There you have the verdicts of the three gentlemen mostly concerned with the Braves. Roll your own conclusions from them.

Hoppe and Allen Even in Match

New York, April 2 (INS)—Willie Hoppe and Allen Hall were all square today as they resumed their 12-block match at three-cushion billiards. Hoppe won the first block, 50 to 44, but lost the second, 56 to 46.

Walker Cochran and Felix Grange also broke even in their 12-block 18.2 balkline match. Cochran won the first block, 300 to 23, in six innings, but the Frenchman ran away with the second block by a score of 300 to 163 in 11 innings.

DEVITO MEETS GANSON ON MAT THURSDAY

Joe DeVito of Providence, Italian wrestler, will make another Boston appearance on Thursday night when he will wrestle Jack Ganson of South Boston in the feature bout of Paul Bowser's all star tournament at the Grand Opera House.

DeVito has the largest following of any Italian wrestler in the world today. In Providence he has drawn big houses, and hundreds of his Italians friends will follow him here to watch him in his important bout with Ganson.

TITLE PROSPECT

The Italian wrestler is looked upon as a potential heavyweight title contender. He has youth, also and skill, and with further experience it is felt that he may carry the heavyweight title to Italy.

Ganson is one of the cleverest as well as one of the roughest wrestlers in the game today, and the battle between him and the young Italian sensation is expected to be fierce.

Pat McGill of Wakefield, one of the best drawing cards in the wrestling game, will make his first appearance of the season against Dan Koloff, champion of the Balkans, and Marcus Kirilenko, latest Russian sensation, will tackle Nick Gotch of New York in the other bouts on the card.

AFTER CHAMP

DeVito, Ganson, McGill, Kirilenko and Gotch are all shooting for a match with Sonnenberg for the heavyweight title.

The champion just drew a $55,000 house with Joe Malcewicz.

Six weeks earlier, he drew $72,500 with Lewis. The other wrestlers are striving to win a shot at the title and all the money that goes with it.

The show will be the first staged since the Malcewicz-Sonnenberg match, and it is expected to draw a capacity crowd to the Grand Opera House.

Boston College Nine Defeats W. and M.

Williamsburg, Va., April 2—Boston College defeated the William and Mary baseball team, 3 to 1, here.

Weston, the first man up for Boston in the seventh, worked Wallace for the pass. He scored a minute later when Gibson singled to right.

Temple, the next batter, knocked the ball down the first base line and Gibson scored while the home team was debating whether the hit was fair or not.

Hockey League War Likely to Come

By BILL GRIMES

Within a period of five years, professional hockey has so firmly established itself in this country, that many of the large cities are anxious to be identified with the great winter sport.

Financially, professional hockey has eclipsed even the wildest dreams of the most optimistic promoters.

The popularity of the game is due to its speed and simplicity. There are as many thrills packed into one hockey game as can be found in any other sport.

Also, and an important factor, the rules are so few that newcomers to the game can acquire a real knowledge of what it is all about in one contest. This fact is particularly advantageous in opening up new fields, where hockey has never been played.

National League hockey has gone over in three American cities in great style. Boston has reaped a harvest from professional hockey, while the game has been a financial success in New York and Detroit.

Due to the poor clubs, plus inadequate seating capacity, Pittsburgh and Chicago have flopped. The Pittsburgh team is through in the Smoky City and will be transferred to either Newark or Chicago next season.

The Pirates were slated to represent Newark but now there is a possibility of the franchise being sold to Paddy Harmon, owner of the Chicago Stadium, the largest hockey rink in the world, while there is talk of the Blackhawks building another rink in the Windy City if the owners cannot come to an agreement with Harmon.

COULD NOT GET FRANCHISE

For some unexplained reason Paddy Harmon was refused an N. H. L. franchise. Harmon must have a hockey club, and if he is not allowed to enter the National Hockey League, there is a war in the offing.

Since Frank Patrick received an offer from Harmon to handle hockey in the Chicago Stadium, much of the N. H. L. opposition to Harmon has faded.

Frank Patrick is recognized as the biggest man in hockey. If he affiliates himself with the Harmon interests, the National Hockey League will make a grave mistake in not lowering the bars for the Harmon-Patrick combination.

Patrick is in closer touch with the hockey situation in the states than even the National Hockey League. He has had lieutenants, who are trustworthy, to a fault, in every league in this country.

And, he has been kept posted in detail with everything pertaining to the game.

WAR AHEAD

Professional hockey is on the brink of an era such as has confronted baseball on three different occasions—a war—which cost the major organizations approximately $3,000,000.

There is a field for a major hockey league in the states and if the National Hockey League fails to appreciate this condition, the time is not far off when there will be a break and a hockey league established with Cleveland, St. Louis Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Boston, as a nucleus.

If Harmon is not admitted to the N. H. L., he would gladly tie up with an outlaw organization. A break would mean that the ranks of the N. H. L. would be raided as were the baseball ranks during the Brotherhood and Federal League days.

The establishment of two leagues, such as the major baseball organizations, would forestall this catastrophy which the N. H. L. faces.

HOCKEY NEEDS RULER

With two leagues in operation under separate organizations, supervised by a dictator, professional hockey would soon be on as firm a footing as baseball, provided, of course, the dictator was of the Judge Landis type.

With two leagues in operation, a world series between the winner clubs of each league would be sufficient to determine the world's championship.

Yale Crews Work During Vacation

Derby, Ct., April 2—Coach Leader of the Yale crew announced plans for the Easter recess, which begins tomorrow.

It was announced that the oarsmen will be in New Haven through Thursday, the varsity having two workouts that day. Thursday night the men will be excused, but will report for practice on Monday.

With the Derby day regatta, on May 4, with Pennsylvania and Columbia less than than five weeks distant, heavy work is planned.

Roslindale Club Bouts Tomorrow

The Roslindale Sporting Club will hold its last amateur boxing show of the season tomorrow night at the Municipal Building, Roslinda's.

There will be contests in the 126, 135, 147 and heavyweight novice classes.

Entries close with A. F. Harrison, 180 Kittredge st., Roslindale Phone Parkway 4333-M.

"I FIND myself once more pausing in front of the display windows of sporting goods houses," said Mr. Boston today.

"This is one of the signs of spring.

"There is something about spring which causes one to desire to get out in the open air and to engage in the various forms of athletics and sports.

"I can picture Jim, my faithful guide at North Conway, getting his boats, fishing rods and tackle ready for the opening of the trout season. When one has Jim for a guide, all one has to do is to pull in the trout. He takes care of everything else, especially the cooking of an excellent meal in the woods on the shore of the lake about midday.

"Baseball will also soon be with us. Joe Cashman, who represented this newspaper with the Red Sox in Florida, is already in town telling the gang what a fine ball club Bob Quinn and Bill Carrigan have for the coming season. If the Sox are only half as good as Joe says they are, I shall be satisfied.

"BASEBALL still has the greatest hold of all the outdoor sports on the American public. It is the national game. Football, boxing, hockey and the other sports still play second fiddle to baseball.

"Boston is one of the best baseball towns in the country. A winning club is all that is necessary to send huge crowds in the direction of Fenway Park and Braves field.

"It has been so long since the Hub has had even a first division club that the fans will give their support to any kind of a winning combination.

"Sunday baseball should help the situation here. It will result in greater revenue for the Red Sox and Braves. This will enable Quinn and the Fuchs-Adams combination to go into the open market and bid for new material. There is a scarcity of promising talent, but a team without a financial reserve has trouble in lining up even fair players.

"THE golfers are also filled with the spirit of spring. I passed the Brookline Country Club on Sunday and saw several merry foursomes doing their best to break 100.

"Golf is today one of the most popular sports in America. Its appeal is due chiefly to the fact it offers all ages an opportunity to get into competition. I have seen youngsters of 16 and veterans of 80 playing side by side. As golf happens to be one game where youth is not always served, the oldtimers get a great thrill out of the pastime.

"I WOULD suggest that everybody who is physically able take part in some form of outdoor exercise. Exercise tends to keep one young and healthy. It also furnishes a safety valve to the tired business man and to the student.

"The trouble with most Americans is that they prefer to watch somebody else compete rather than getting into the game themselves. Of course it is better to get out into the open air and watch a ball game than to remain in a stuffy office working over figures and other accounts, but if possible become an active sport competitor. Be proud of your golf score of 120.

"If you don't care to play golf, tennis, baseball or go swimming, park yourself in a rowboat and get some exercise pulling in a five-pound trout. If you think it is a cinch to land a five-pound trout, you have never tried to do your stuff on one of the lakes of New Hampshire."

Miami Chatter

Miami, Fla., April 2—Commissioner Landis is visiting the Braves' camp.

He splits his time between golf and baseball.

He played the difficult La Gorce course here in 94, coming home in 44, and is the happiest bird in Florida.

The Judge plays a mashie niblick like a pro. He has learned the art of approaching, since he left the bench to preside over baseball. His eye is as keen as his brain. And he wears a respectable Panama on the links.

Hank Gowdy has escorted a squad of Braves up to Gainesville to pay the University of Florida Lance Richbourg, the Uni's most notable athletic alumnus, went along to play right field.

The Braves depart tonight at 11:20 and arrive tomorrow afternoon in Columbus. They play a game there, then jump to Richmond for a three-day stopover.

Judge Fuchs entrains for New York this evening. Johnny Evers will have the team exclusively for a week, and will make the important decisions about the lineup for the opening game.

Chances are that Johnny will have his old buddies, Hank and the Rabbit, in there if the last decision is his. The veteran catcher has won himself a chance. Youth is no longer served in this game of baseball.

MARTHA LEE'S CHAT

VARIETY of food is unquestionably the spice of life—and variety of meat dishes adds interest to meal planning and preparation. Medoubts that Nature will ever produce for us a new meat animal, and I wonder if it is necessary, as many homemakers are unfamiliar with all the cuts made from the present meat animals.

Ted Bachman
Martha Lee

The beef animal of today is not all steaks and chops, in fact just a little over 25 per cent of the weight of the beef animal is loin and rib, or what is generally known as choice cuts. They have been so called because they are tender even in the raw state, and may, therefore, be cooked in a short time.

The other cuts of the meat animal are rich in muscle tissue, as well as extractives or meat flavor, but in order to make them truly delicious, they must be cooked slowly and for a long time. This long, slow cooking develops the marvelous flavor enjoyed when eating a juicy, well-cooked pot roast or a savory, flavorful Swiss steak.

Cuts from the neck, plate or short ribs, flank and shank are least in demand, yet these cuts are equally as nutritious as the most expensive steak or roast and when properly cooked more delicious in flavor.

Other cuts unknown to many homemakers are the skirt steak and hanging tenderloin. Because there is so little demand for these cuts, they often "go begging," while the homemaker is spending two or three times their cost for a more popular cut of meat.

The smart shopper will market in person, become acquainted with the many tempting cuts of meat heretofore unknown to her, and will try a few of the following suggestions and use them as foundation recipes, substituting other muscle cuts from any of the meat animals.

In this way it is possible to supply the family with the necessary protein requirement and serve tempting yet relatively inexpensive meals.

SKIRT STEAK PATTIES

Purchase a beef skirt weighing about 1 to 1¼ lbs.; wipe with a damp cloth. Cut in half and roll and tie or skewer each half in 4 pieces. Then cut between the skewers into 4 patties. Flatten each with a rolling pin or wooden potato masher. Wrap a piece of bacon around each patty and fasten with a toothpick. Pan or oven broil as you would a tenderloin patty. Season with salt and pepper and when ready to serve place a lump of butter on each patty. Serve with mashed potatoes and a creamed vegetable.

SWISS STEAK

1 to 1½ lbs. skirt steak.
¼ c. flour.
Bacon drippings.
1 tsp. salt.
⅛ tsp. pepper.
Onion (if desired).

Wipe the meat and sprinkle with ¼ c. flour and seasoning. Pound this into the meat with a meat hammer or edge of thick plate. Turn the meat and do the same to the other side. Cut into portions for serving. Brown well in bacon drippings in a heavy skillet. Add ½ c. water or canned tomato, 1 medium-sized onion and ½ green pepper minced. Cover and cook slowly for 1 hour. If necessary, add more water or tomato juice during the cooking.

BRAISED NECK OF BEEF

Bone and roll a neck of beef. Wipe with a damp cloth and wrap or lard with strips of bacon. Place meat in a deep casserole or baking dish; add 1 medium-sized onion, a turnip and a carrot. Cover with 4 c. of boiling water, add salt and pepper, allowing ½ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper for each pound of meat. Bake in a 325 degrees or moderate oven, allowing 30 minutes to the pound. When meat is tender, make a gravy by adding browned flour to liquid in dish. Add more seasoning if necessary. Plan an even dinner when cooking this dish and save time, fuel and labor.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

If I am in a public place, sitting down, and an elderly lady stops to speak to me, should I rise?

2. I am acquainted with an elderly lady, and as I have always known her I call her by her first name. If I were introducing her to a younger girl, which would be proper: "Miss Brown, this is my friend Mary" or "Anne, this is my friend Mary?" Is it all right to introduce people that way?

3. Would it be all right for me to call my friend "Anne" before somebody that has just been introduced to her?

4. Is it proper to thank anyone for sending a card or telephoning?

5. If a person is asked a question which must be answered, but which the person does not wish to answer, what is the best thing to do?

ELIZABETH.

YES.

2 No, either form of introduction would be in good taste or in good form. Say, "Mrs. Allen, Miss Brown."

3. Yes, if you are used to calling her by her first name.

4. Yes, always.

5. In this difficult position, we can first say: "Must I really answer that?" or "I should so much prefer not to answer this question. Do you really insist that I should?"

"Two months ago my grocer called my attention to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I began eating it regularly. Immediately the pain and annoyance from the piles was relieved. I found that it requires very little ALL-BRAN to give nature a fair chance to effect a cure."—WALTER J. LIND, R. 2, Box 181, Appleton, Wis.

Don't neglect constipation. At any time its poisons may take terrible toll from your health and well-being. Protect yourself. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly—two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. ALL-BRAN brings sure, natural relief. It is what doctors call a bulk food. 'The Return of Old King Brady'; A Thrilling Detective Story

Edited by Merle W. Hersey.

CHAPTER I

Old King Brady makes a call in Greenwich Village and gets some inside information from the district telegraph office. He interviews the hotel manager and a bellhop. The body at the morgue is identified as that of a beliboy.

"WELL, and what do you think now?" Jack Raymond demanded impatiently, after they had made their report to the old detective.

"That your Wall street prince saw his chance and took it. This fire was just what he wanted," was Old King Brady's response.

"I don't help him," signed Fred. "Now, gentleman," said the detective, "I have been over your list of stocks carefully and I'll take them off your hands temporarily at all events. Will that suit you?"

The two young brokers hardly knew how to express their thanks. They were saved from suspension and with Old King Brady backing them they might recover the rest of their losses.

It was nearly midnight when Old King Brady left the house. He proceeded to Greenwich Village to Jane st., where he entered an old-fashioned saloon occupying the ground floor of an old wooden building. The little black bar looked as though it might have been there for a century. The walls were lined with engravings and a few oil paintings, in quaint frames, some of them of great value.

There were but a few persons seated about the tables. Behind the bar sat the "landlord"—old Gerald Duncewell, an Englishman by birth, who could tip the scales at 400 pounds.

He greeted Old King Brady cordially. "Where on earth have you been keeping yourself, Brady? I haven't seen you for ages. What brings you here at this hour?"

"Business, George. Didn't you tell me your grandson was deputy superintendent of the district telegraph?"

"I did and he is still."

"Well, I want to use him. Where is your telephone?"

"Right here. Shall I call him for you?"

"Yes. I want to get the number of the messenger boy who delivered a letter at Ripley's morgue early this morning." Within a half hour the reply came:

"No. 3206, Eighth ave. and 34th st. Boy on duty now."

Old King Brady thanked George Rounduell and started off toward Sixth ave.

"2206! Wanted!" A slim, red-headed youth came forward.

Old King Brady spoke to him. "What sort of looking man gave you the letter to take to Ripley's Morgue?"

"It was a boy, sir. He was taller than me, with white hair, an' dressed in a uniform. He looked like a bellboy."

"What did he say?"

"Nothing, except to take it to Ripley's morgue," the boy replied "Was there an answer?"

"No, sir. De man at de morgue just read de letter an' den he took de money and said all right."

Old King Brady figured the quickest he could come up with the young Wall Street Prince, if he was still alive, the greater chance he had of being able to make him disgorge.

"I must try the hotel," he thought.

The Charlton Hotel was far uptown on the West Side.

The night clerk received him courteously and inquired his business.

Old King Brady wasted no words. "I have reasons for suspecting that a body taken from here yesterday morning to Ripley's morgue was not that of Prince Hohenheizen."

"Indeed!" said the clerk. "I know nothing of it."

"Is there anyone here who knows the circumstances?"

"Yes, Mr. Gates, our manager," he replied. "I will send for him at once." He dispatched a boy to the manager's room.

"Pardon me," said the old detective. "Tell me about this Prince Hohenheizen."

"Well, he came here about eight months ago, direct from Germany, supposedly. He had one attendant whom he soon dismissed, and lived alone. He was a singular character."

"How old should you think he was?"

"Certainly not over nineteen. He was tall for his age and coarse looking. He was always well dressed, and spent money freely," he continued. "He spoke very good English."

Here the manager appeared. Old King Brady rehearsed the points of the case. The manager took him directly to the room where the body was found. Everything was in direful confusion. Partitions were down, the rooms on either side were wrecked, the damage had been immense, the floor boards had been burned away in two places, the bed and other furniture having been destroyed.

"Who found the body?" demanded Old King Brady, looking around.

"I did. It lay there, face downward, over the place where the largest piece of the flooring was burned away."

"Did not the position strike you as strange? Unless he was already dead he would have turned over at least." He paused a moment and then said in his positive manner: "Mr. Gates, I know that a boy was substituted for that of the prince and that the body in the morgue is not his."

"You don't mean it? You did not say that before."

"I was waiting for a good opportunity. The prince did it himself. He needed assistance, so let us assume he called in one of the bellboys to help him. Was there a bellboy who did errands for the prince?

"Yes," said the manager, "Jim Walton."

"Well, we'll see him later," declared the king. "Tell me, who among the guests or bellboys resembled the prince?"

The manager pondered for a few minutes and then declared he could think of no one. Then, "Hold on! I've got it! It was a bellboy, a young German, Karl Wirtz by name. He had just such a head of hair as the prince."

"Is he missing? And he resembled the Prince?"

"He is missing. And he certainly looked like the Prince."

"Enough. Take me to the rooms where your bellboys are off duty and let me interview Master Jim Walton."

Manager Gates led the way. Old King Brady said, "Is Jim a bright fellow?"

"No, rather stupid."

"Did he answer the calls from the Prince's room?"

"Yes."

"Very well. If he refuses to answer me I shall pretend to arrest him, but actually take him to the morgue and confront him with the body," said the old detective quietly. "I refer to handle the boy alone."

The manager pointed out Jim, asleep. Old King Brady suddenly pulled the covers back. Clutching the boy's arm the detective jerked him out of bed and onto his feet. "Wha-what are you doing?. It is fire? he gasped.

"This is the fellow, Mr. Gates! I put him under arrest." So Jim was taken downstairs and clapped into a cab. Not a word did Old King Brady utter until after they had started.

"What did you do with Karl Wirtz?" he asked quietly.

"I don't know nuffin about him. Last I see of Karl he got off de elevator on de tent' floor."

"Where were you?"

"On de elevator. I was going to wake de people up."

"And Karl was at it, too? Tell the truth or hold your tongue."

"Sure he was. Say, youse is Old King Brady, bain't yer?"

"I am."

"Gee! Den I'm up against it. And Jim subsided into his corner and said no more until they reached the morgue.

Advantages of Tears

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

TEARS are nothing to be ashamed of.

In fact, not only are tears a very natural outlet for pentup emotion, they can actually do one good.

Women cry more readily than men. They are moved to tears by joy as well as by sadness.

When men cry it is usually so labored that it impresses an onlooker as being real deep suffering. Such suffering, however, is relief for all that, and whatever gives relief does good.

Indeed, it is better that an individual actually sob, painful though it may be as compared to ordinary weeping, rather than that the emotion be held in and repressed.

Restrained emotion can even affect the heart and give pain.

One often hears women talk of "having a good cry" and they talk of it as though it gave them pleasure.

This is true. Weeping does afford pleasure. It is the pleasure of relief.

It is interesting to note anyway how closely allied joy and sorrow really are.

Joy and sorrow are the opposite extreme of an identical emotion.

Have you ever observed that the facial expression of a person crying may look like that of one laughing?

Tears may likewise lead to laughter and laughter, if kept up long enough to tears.

In an hysterical attack it is often impossible to tell whether the person is laughing or crying.

The closeness of these two supposedly contrary emotions helps to explain why some shed tears at a wedding or when they receive good news, while others laugh when sudden and terrible disaster overwhelms them as for example, one to lose a entire fortune in the stock market.

Tears, by the way, are secreted by the lachrymal glands, one in the corner of each eye.

From seven to 12 tiny ducts run from the gland to the surface of the eye, which is continually kept moist. Another duct runs from the lachrymal gland into the nose.

Tears consist of water and a little salt and albumin.

Under ordinary circumstances they are carried off about as fast as they are formed. But when the eye is irritated or the mind registers strong emotion, the tears accumulate, overflow the lids and run down the cheeks.

Children, of course, cry more readily than adults. This is because their emotions are less stabilized and are subject to explosions.

The older we get the more we tend to repress and hold our emotions in check.

There are many who might do well to weep less. They have actually developed a habit of weeping.

Sets Style

This lovely New York girl, now appearing in George White's famous "scandals," has plenty of personality. Not only has she won Broadway's admiration by the cleverness of her acting and dancing, but she has literally "set the style" for Fifth Avenue by the way she dresses her hair.

"Girls in my position must do everything to keep their appearance pleasing," says Miss Manners. "But I lead such a busy life that I can only use the simplest methods. I know I have discovered the easiest way of doing my hair. It's so popular now here in New York. It keeps my hair so easily manageable that I can dress it any way I want and it stays in place wonderfully. All I do is put a little Danderine on my brush every time I use it. My hair was dull and wiry before I started using Danderine. Now it's so bright and sparkling and so soft and fluffy that every one compliments me. Danderine soothes my scalp and keeps away all traces of dandruff. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean, I don't need to shampoo half as often as I used to."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from the hair; brings out its natural color; makes it fairly sparkle. It keeps your hair soft and easily manageable while you're letting it grow to the new length. It helps stop dandruff. It is delightfully fragranced; isn't oily; doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Over five million used a year.

The BROADWAY MELODY

by JACK LAIT

A Story With a Thousand Thrilling Episodes

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

EDDIE KEENS, song plugger, has written the music for "The Broadway Melody," a big revue, to be produced by the famous Zanfield. For two years Eddie has been engaged to "Hank" Mahoney, and now he sees his way clear to marry her. She and her younger sister, Queenie, are playing in vaudeville. Eddie tells them he has managed to place them in the revue. Eddie discovers he's lost his heart to Queenie. He keeps his secret from Hank.

Zannie, after seeing the "Mahoney Sisters" perform, decides that he could only use Queenie. She begs him to give her sister a chance. He consents. Hank believes she put it over. Eddie shows the sisters the big ad in the newspaper announcing their coming to Broadway. When Hank kisses Eddie, Queenie cries. Zannie gives Queenie a place in the revue. Two "angels" of the revue invite her out to dine. Dore, one of the show girls, tells Queenie to watch her step with Worthington.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER 8

AS Eddie approached Queenie, she saw in his eye a look she had never know it could register. Eddie Kerns was clearly "sore."

"What's the big idea?" he shot at her. "I was on there downstage goin' through my number, an' here you were, holdin' hands with that tallow-weight bum, Reginald Worthington an' swappin' a line with Francis Warriner, the best known 'on-the-make' party around these way. I couldn' break up the number an' I couldn't keep my pan toward the front on account o' tryin' to keep cases on you, an'—"

"What's all that?" demanded Hank, who had come up from the dressing room side at the same time.

"Search me," said Queenie, to 'unk, for Eddie s benefit. "Two of e angels came back and talked to e. What could I do?"

"You know what you could do—very girl dear," snapped Hank. "What were you talkin' about? An' did you say yes or no?"

"Just a minute, Eddie," cut in Hank. "You an' I are engaged, you've been mighty sweet to her, Queenie an' me, an' all that. But where do you come in to bawl the kid out—with a lot o' dirty remarks pickin' up an earful to make it perfect?"

"Let's go in your dressing-room," said Eddie.

When he had closed the door he started sizing up and down the little chamber, talking at neither of the girls in particular.

"I had a hunch that I was goin' to have millionaire-trouble the minute I put two smalltown gals with bigtown looks in a Zanfield troupe. Oh, I know you're citybroke and been up against plenty o' propositions an' diff'rent kinds o' go-get-'em guys. But not this kind.

"The minute they saw Queenie on that love boat they began lettin' out their silk lins with the shiny hook on the end. Ev'rybody says she's goin' to be the beauty o' the season. Well, when kind go after that kind quick and hard an' good an' dirty. Expense don't count—they're rotten with dough. Queenie may know how to protect herself with the reg'lar run o' rats, but she's up against a new racket here.

"An' I wann her to strictly law off the Warriners an' the Worthingtons, especially that Warriner whose got a reputation up an' down this alley like nobody's business. He's more than just rich—he's good lookin' an' a smooth operator. That Worthington is just a big, fat booze guzzler. He buys dames by the pound—buys 'em at their weight an' pays for 'em as his. With all his jack I don' think he'd get to first base with Queenie. But that Warry — wow! He's got records."

Queenie was a girl who never said much.

She was not eloquent at argument and her mental set-up did not run to psychology, philosophy or long-hot views of elemental values. Things to her were actual, immediate. Her life had been narrow despite her several years of travel, knocking about in vaudeville and bumping and rubbing against many sorts of humans in the synthetic hectic avenues and lanes of show business.

It seemed to her the d'Onegin girl had made an awful verbal fuss over her brief chat with Queenie and Warry, and that Eddie was stewing over it rather volubly and impatiently, too. What was all this about? She was no unsophisticated baby. All their warnings and metaphorical stop-lights gave her a feeling that they were hysterical about little and were overplaying a melodrama where the plot and cast were rigged up for a light comedy.

She had heard out the hard-boiled showgirl because she felt that her volunteer lay counsel had sincerely meant to be helpful. But it had gone in one ear and out the other. When Eddie spoke, however—well, that was far different. Not only was he her benefactor, not only did she view him as the apotheosis of all that was wise and lofty in the profession, but—

She hadn't dared say it to even herself, and didn't now.

When she was 16, when she had first met Eddie and he had fallen in love with Hank, she hadn't bothered much about him and he had tolerated her only as the necessary excess baggage of a sister act. But now—when she was 18—when their eyes had met as their eyes had met; when he had kissed her in an ostensibly platonic, if not coldly, in-law-to-be manner and her reaction had been the most turbulent, terrifying, terrific thrill of her whole life—that whole life had changed.

She saw now that his fierce attitude toward her brief episode with the two predatory millionaires was actuated by an emotion far deeper than a mere manly impulse to warn a girl he thought was in danger—or a future sister-in-law in that situation.

The thought of being disloyal to Hank was horrible. To even think of treachery toward her was black and wicked. And here—now—

Hank spoke:

"I'm in with what you say, Eddie. But you don't know Queen like I do. She's smart and straight. She can take care of herself."

"No, she can't. No girl can take care of herself. If she could, she wouldn't be a girl—she'd be a woman. She can't know all that an 18 year old girl has heard a hundred of 'em say—Oh, I know all that stuff . . . I've heard an' I've read an' I've seen' . . . well, it's all fine, but it don't go for ME! Ev'ry girl thinks a special miracle was put on for her p'licular benefit. Then, when it's too late, she wakes up with a headache, an' worse than that. An' she cries 'Why did this have to happen to just ME?'

"They think becus nobody ever hit 'em there ain't no sharpshooters what can. Well, at no time in this here life have any of us been up against everything an' everybody we're goin' to have to run into. A girl don' have to be a simp for men or loose or a sap. It's always one man comes along that's got somethin'—looks, or personality, or a slick routine, or a big name, or the power to hand out somethin' that's hard to get, or love the good old manuna. We may all think we ain' gold-diggers. An' it's true. But that printin' on them nice big bills sure is in a language all us own. It's mighty hard to cut-talk a great note."

Crumpled and moist in Queenie's hand was the left half of one of those grand notes—a $1000 bill.

The future has in store for them. Be content with life as you find it. Of course, you can help to make of life what you will, especially if you take Love into your heart. For he's the greatest of fortune tellers, for when he claims you then and then only can you know that the future holds happiness and Peace and Joy forever and ever.

Modern Pandoras

Dorothy Flack

WE all know the story of Pandora, who was entrusted with a casket which she was warned not to open. Her curiosity was so great that she finally opened the casket, thereby letting loose all the trouble in the world.

And so it is with the modern Pandoras, who seek to know what

Sister Against Sister for the Love of a Man

The other half was to be here if she met Warry and Stewie an' had a snack with them at some classy cafe. It burned her palm She had quite forgotten that it was still there. She turned with a sense of guilt, walked out of immediate view and put the thing in her stocking.

"Ah, don't let it worry you, Eddie, she said, her first words since the conversation had opened. 'They were just kiddin' with me about takin' me out. I laughed it off."

"Well, it burnt me up, me tryin to sing an' hoof out there. Laugh that off?"

Hank looked at him curiously. There seemed to her he had put a ring in the speech that was—h'm, strange. And the way he had looked at her, too, was—oh, nonsense; she must have overwrought herself with the disappointment of having their most conspicuous double number cut out abruptly by Zannie and the whole excitement of the dress rehearsal and everything.

"We've got to dress Eddie—make a change for our next number. We've still got that," said Queenie, by way of breaking the tension and trying to act merry.

"We've still got it till Zannie sees it," said Hank, gloomily. "If he chops that one baby I don' know where we'll be at. He ain' goin to pay out double dough for you to sit on that love boat for a minute an' a half while a sad-panned tenor warbles a ditty."

"I'll see what I can do with Zannie," said Eddie, carrying on the bluff that he had a drag with the mighty glorifier. "It's six, two an' even I can get him to put back the other number, too."

"Oh, Eddie," moaned Hank, "if you'd do that I'd give you anything—anything on earth that you could ask."

Eddie's glance met Queenie's.

"Anything?" he said, in answer to Hank but with his eyes on Queenie.

"That's what I said—anything . . . what can I lose? I'm goin to marry you, so whatever I've got is yours and when it's yours it's mine . . . besides, what have I got to give? But you'll try, won't you honey?"

He nodded his head.

"Hey—snap out of it, Queenie called Hank. "You look like you' dreamin' on your feet . . . as maybe that handsome an' wealth Warry did hang it on you." She crossed Eddie and put her hand on Queenie's shoulders. "Look at me, kid . . . you haven't—yet ain't—you ain't in love?"

Queenie attempted a broad grin but the best that she could make was a somewhat wistful smile.

"Why not?" pursued Hank. 'never think n' you bein' that we is some guy but you're 18. was so wild over Eddie when was 18 that I couldn't eat, sleep see. I s'pose that could happen you—"

What" gasped Queenie, blood flying to her cheeks under the makeup.

"Well, somethin' like that—m with Eddie, of course, but with man. You ain't immune, youn lady. I don't guess any of us are

"Maybe not," muttered Queeni "But don't talk like that. We got a show to do on our hands . . . co on, Eddie—you've got to talk the air now."

"I-I guess I'd better," said he. "Tch—that's right—you'd better echoed Queenie. "And—don't worr about Warry—he's nothin' to me."

by the sun, and his eyes were gray and keen, but they were eyes that did not tell his thoughts unless he willed them to do so.

He was not the hero of her dreams, but he was something better than Jephson, and her tired mind told her to trust him.

At last he said: "You need food and rest. You had better come with me."

After a few steps, she put a hand on his arm as though for support or guidance. "Is it far?" she asked.

It was evident she could not go much farther. With every step that approached his biding place he was more anxious lest they should be seen. He did not think he could carry her far.

He spoke loudly, as to one who was deaf.

"We are very near now. But we must hasten. There is danger here. There are men about who must not see us."

He could not have struck a better note.

When she walked in the shelter of the hut inside the tunnel she had no memory of how she had reached it.

Mardin looked at her as she slept. She had fallen forward as he pointed to the bed which he had made in a corner of the cabin and had been asleep in an instant. He had prepared food, and tried in vain to rouse her to share it.

Would she wish to stay when she waked? Would she wish to betray him to others? She was a delight to watch as she slept.

After a time she opened wondering eyes to the interior of the cabin.

At last he spoke. "Will you tell me how you came?"

She said: "I swam to the land. I had been all day in the water."

"You will need food," he said, "there is breakfast waiting outside." He went out.

She followed a few moments later. She moved stiffly, but in the close-fitting bathing-dress she appeared tall and graceful. He was conscious that his heart was beating more rapidly, but his manner gave no sign as he asked: "Are you warm enough in that dress? I can find you clothes of a kind."

The tone and the words pleased her, and she laughted for the first time, giving him open friendly eyes as she answered.

"Oh, no, it is warm enough; and I am used to this. I don't think I should care for yours. Let's have breakfast first, and then we can think of other things. If you know how hungry I am—!"

As he divided the meal, he made an apology for his lack of variety, and she laughed in answer: "I have never enjoyed the look of one in my life so much. Do you know that it is more than 24 hours since I have eaten? And how far I have swum since then!"

"Where were you going?" he asked.

She answered lightly. "I am going to see the world. I have had enough of sea-water."

His trained faculty of compromise showed him the way to solve the issue successfully. He said: "Suppose you stay for a week. We can be friends for that time, and you can help me in many ways. Then you can go if you will, and I am quite sure that you will not betray me."

"Yes," she said, "I do not know—no. I mean I certainly should not betray you to anyone. Anyway, I will stay today if you really wish it."

He showed her his armory. There were two trophies which he had taken from the house to which they were going. A hunting knife with sheath and belt, and a five-foot spear with a bamboo shaft.

He showed her an automatic pistol with a store of ammunition which he had found, and which he now proposed to hide in the depths of the tunnel.

"Why don't you take it with you if there is any danger?" she asked. "I suppose you can use it?"

He answered frankly: "I never fired a shot in my life, but I know how it is made, and how it works. I had to defend a man last February who was accused of murder, and had been shot at with such a weapon."

It was the first allusion he had made to his previous life.

"Then you are Martin Webster?" she asked.

"Yes," he said. "I was—I don't know what I am now."

They made a day of it gathering what spoils they could and even succeeded in killing a small pig.

Martin still feared the men he had heard and their journey back was pursued with precaution. They did not speak as they walked.

They heard a man singing. He was not over sober. They hid until he had passed.

Claire proposed that they should await dusk. It seemed safer than to venture again across the open fields.

They began to talk very quietly After a few suggestions Martin asked: "Is it rude to wonder—or to ask who you are?"

She answered slowly: "No, it's quite natural. I might have told you before." She smiled slightly. "If I don't introduce myself no one else will. I know who you are, so it's only fair. My name is Claire. I took a B. A. at Newnham. I went through the war. I was 29 last April, which usually means 30—or more. I have had a baby which died. I had an invalid husband who carried now he is dead. Finally, I swam here." There was a movement behind and Martin looked round quickly. He saw a huge form towering over them. He saw a swarthy brutal face, coarse and fleshy, with matted hair overhanging it, and a black stubble of beard. He saw eyes that were murderous, but without rage. They were eyes that enjoyed murder. He saw a massive, hairy arm that grasped a sledge hammer halfway up the handle, making it look small and light for his purpose.

A second later, had he stayed or had he tried to rise, his life would have ended; but he slipped down the bank, and the blow missed.

Claire would have followed but the giant's hand was in her hair and she was caught.

Claire fought for a moment in a frenzy of fear and loathing, but was carried off.

They came, as the darkness fell, to an open glade in the oakwood where a wood fire was burning. About a score of men and two women were seated or moving round it. There was a smell of roasting pork. A cart stood in the shadow, and two horses were tethered.

The giant threw Claire on the ground and to one of the women who came up with some lengths of rope. She was lean and slatternly, with a straggle of straight gray hair, and eyes that showed bloodshot in the firelight. She bound Claire's ankles tightly, and then her hands behind her back.

Claire supposed that these men had been respectable, or at least, law-abiding but a few weeks ago. Could all have degenerated so quickly to the brutal level of the man who had seized her.

Suddenly she became aware that in the shadow, where her feet lay, a knife was cutting through the cords. Then they were free, and for some moments nothing more happened.

She looked up to see whether her captor's eyes were upon her. He was leaning back on a tree-trunk, his meal ended The froth of liquor was on his mouth, and he licked the pork grease from his hand as he regarded her. She thought fearfully that she had delayed too long. Any moment the monstrous filthy hand might reach down to grip her by arm or hair. Could she avoid him quickly enough if he should do so?

He saw the fear in her eyes with a chuckle. Then he saw her grasp that him with a startled wonder, which was veiled in an instant. He was not quick to perceive, nor used to fear, but a premonition of danger made him turn his head to the point above him that had caught her notice, but the next instant it sagged forward as though he slept. He remained in that position for a few moments, and then his body fell sideways; but it fell unnoticed amidst the pandemonium that surrounded it.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

REBUILDING REQUIREMENTS ILLUSTRATED

Contract Bridge

VALUATION and Bidding — South, with massed values in two suits amounting to six probable tricks, opens the bidding with one Spade. West's overcall of two Hearts is passed by both North and East, as each one is short of the number of Probable Tricks required to accord an immediate assist.

The strength of South's Spade suit and the number of Probable Tricks held with Spades as trump (six) are sufficient for an immediate rebid to two West passes. North, with three probable tricks beside the minimum strength for one assist after his partner's rebid. Therefore he bids three Spades.

East, failing a rebid by West must again pass, as must also South who, by his rebid to two, had shown the full strength of his hand. Manifestly had South an additional trick strength, even though fractional, he might have been justified in bidding for the game contract.

The fact that but three tricks can be made serves to illustrate the futility of attempting to stretch the bidding, when obviously there can be no game in the hand.

Auction Bridge

At Auction Bridge, South's rebid to two Spades would secure no contract.

There is practically no way, barring bad defense, that will permit South to make more than three odd on the hand. The only doubtful point in the play is as to West opening lead, whether the Ace of Hearts or the top of his doublet Diamond. Holding the Ace of trumps the Diamond opening would seem to offer the better chance of picking up an extra trick.

Tomorrow's hand will illustrate the use of quick trick values.

MOTHER TRUTH'S MELODIES

IN spite of eugenics, disinclination and companion marriage there are still quite a few tiny tots who need instructions in good behavior. In order to remedy this situation, various lyrics from "Mother Truth's Melodies," published in 1888 by Mrs. E. P. Miller, will be reprinted from time to time in this department. "Our hope," says Mrs. Miller, in her foreword, "is that the truths presented, even if not fully understood at first, will leave their impress, and in so far as they fill the little minds, will keep out falsehood and false ideas."

The Temperance Child

"Mama, if you'd have me
Be a temperance child,
You must give me only
Food that's pure and mild.
Highly seasoned dishes
Make the stomach crave
Stronger things; and often
Lead to a drunkard's grave."

Press dispatch says—

LONDON—Scotland Yard is considering the adoption of a novel trap for bandits in motor cars. The device consists of a mat of steel tentacles and wire chains, placed across the road. When the bandit car crosses the mat the wires and chains grip the chassis and entangle it in such a manner that a fast-moving car is stopped in less than 100 yards.

Of course the bandits must agree to play fair, and not make a sudden turn down a side street.

HER NEW SPRING COAT

Today's Short Story

WHEN Anne told her mother she had paid for the new spring coat, Mrs. Harvey launched into one of her old-fashioned lectures, just as Anne had feared she would.

And so forth and so on, while Anne stood meekly by, bending her head to the storm of maternal wrath.

But she hadn't been able to resist it, all the other "sensible" coats had looked cheap and dowdy beside it. Once she had tried it on, she began to prepare to brave her mother's wrath. She just had to have it for it brought a touch of Park avenue to the side street, where Anne and her mother had managed to grub along, lived in genteel poverty since Mr. Harvey's death.

Anne wore her new coat to work the next day despite her mother's suggestion that she reserve it for Sunday wear.

For a while it appeared that the new coat was in for a disastrous wetting because a downpour started soon after Anne reached the office. All through the day she watched the window and was relieved to see the skies clear shortly before 5 o'clock.

Usually Anne skipped across Eighth avenue on her way to the subway without thought of the passing cars and trucks, but this evening she took no chances. It wasn't enough that she dodged the wheels of a truck, she had to make certain that it didn't spatter her precious new coat.

She waited on the curb until the street seemed comparatively free and then stepped off on the heavy planking covering the excavation for the new subway.

Plunk!

A heavy can, coming from behind her, turned the corner and its wheels passed over the end of a loose board. The opposite end near Anne, shot up and with it came a pool of mud and dirty water.

It didn't spatter her; it deluged her. The fine new coat was a sodden, dripping wreck and Anne's face and hands looked like she had been indulging in the children's game of making "mud pies."

The car slid to a stop and a young man jumped out and came running back to where Anne stood futilely attempting to wipe the mudstains from her coat.

"I can't tell you how sorry I am," he began. "It was all my fault. To tell you the truth, I didn't see that loose board. Here, let me help you."

Tears came to Anne's eyes as she watched his clumsy attempts to clean the coat with a large white handkerchief.

"It's no use," she said. "It's—it's ruined, just ruined."

"Don't say that, please," he begged. "Here, let me take you home. You can't go home by yourself looking like this."

He led her to his car and almost mechanically Anne got in, glad to escape the stares of the crowd that had gathered to watch the spectacle of a good-looking young man wiping mud from the coat of a pretty girl on a busy corner.

"Do you mind if I introduce myself?" he asked. "I'm Stanley Loring. Really I'm awfully sorry this happened but I'm going to tell you I'm glad, too.

"I've often seen you pass the corner in the evening," he went on, "and I've wanted to meet you and tell you—"

His voice trailed off as Anne brushed the tears from her eyes without replying. But she had heard him and she stole a look at him when he slowed down for a traffic light. It WAS a shame about her new coat, but then he might have been fat and old and not at all like he was. And maybe the coat could be cleaned.

Stanley Loring thought so, too.

"I'll come around this evening and get it, if you don't mind," he said when they had reached Anne's home. "If it can't be cleaned you must let me get you a new one."

And then, when he called that evening to take the coat to the cleaner, what more natural than that he should ask Anne to go with him.

"Maybe we can take a little ride," he said. "Please don't say no. Otherwise I'll know you haven't forgiven me."

They did take a ride, only it wasn't a little one. It was such a long one that the cleaner's was closed when they finally remembered why they had come, so the mud-splashed coat went home again with Anne.

"We'll take it tomorrow night?" he asked when he left her.

But the next night Anne brought him in to meet her mother, and again they forgot about the coat and went to the theater instead.

Only they forgot about it entirely, for they had other things to think about, having discovered the moon and the stars and the stillness of a summer night and those other things that a man and a woman discover when they are young and alone together.

So that mud-splattered coat hung in a corner of Anne's closet until she had gone on her honeymoon and Mrs. Harvey, rummaging through her daughter's things, discovered it there.

"I knew Anne would never get $30 worth of wear out of this," she said to herself.

"Oh, well, things turn out for the best. If Anne hadn't bought it and heard him and she stole a look at him when he slowed down for a traffic light. It WAS a shame about her new coat, but then he

THE 'BAER' FACTS

-:- By 'Bugs' Baer

IF you see the clover-kickers and the hay-benders rattling off for the cyclone cellars you will know that another farm relief bill comes up on April 15.

The farmers are always glad when the new Congress opens until they discover that it had instructions to act like the old one.

There are now 48 bills in preparation. Each one of the 48 will relieve the farmer so much that the other 47 can be used as bandages.

The twin McNary-Haugen combination turned out to be more Siamese than suburban.

McNary-Haugen would have done better if they had stretched their bill on a hoop and then jumped through it.

Few people know that there is a farmers' union. Its purpose is not to get an eight-hour day. A weed-jerker works so hard that he would be glad to get an eight-hour night.

The trouble with the dirt farmer is just that. The latest quotation on dirt was three cents a bushel.

Senator Umbay of North or South Guam strikes the key-note on the wet banjo when he asks:

"How are we going to get them back to the farm after they've seen relief?"

Representative Scrambo, who has the senior convicted seat in Congress, remarks:

"The solution is diversified weeding. For 15 years I sought for bigger and better crops."

"Now I will be content if I can get them free grass seeds for their graves."

Assistant Senator Inkdoot, who was a probationary congressman before he became the pet of the investigation committees, thinks along different loopholes:

"A bumper wheat crop makes the golfers sore. There is too much rough in the country as it is."

So you can see that the farmers are between the cup and the bunkers.

While endeavoring to discover just when a relief program merged into an autopsy, Senator Ditto gives some interesting data on the relapse of Bull Durham:

"I have always pondered over the reason why Bull Durham went out of style.

"I have just found out. The farmer can no longer roll his own because the banks have all his paper."

CAN ALWAYS LEARN

By LUCY LOWELL.

I HEARD a lady remark the other day that she was about to study Latin.

She was not an extremely young lady, being past 40, and she would have, in so far as I could determine, no practical use for a knowledge though dead language since her children are grown up and she has no intention of teaching.

"But you see," she explained, "it's been some years since I've done any real studying and I have the strange feeling that my brain is getting sort of set and unpliant as a thing does when you give it no use.

"As I look at things," she went on, "no human being with leisure to do anything about it has reason for letting his thinking processes get to a point where they are no longer up to capacity.

"When this happens to the body this run-down going-to-seed condition, we take a tonic, something to tone us up to normal activity.

"Well then, that is what Latin will do to my mentality, give me exercise which will stir the thoughts working again at normal capacity.

"Of course, I could have selected a modern language, one which you may think would be of more use to me. But there is no language as I see it, so far reaching and complete and full of such thrilling adventures as to spell—as Latin. Of course, it is one of the parents of most modern languages and if you are interested in words and then derivation and exact meaning, Latin cannot help being all romance to you."

Some way it seemed to me that the lady wrote a great deal about laying up happiness for herself.

While she is studying Latin she not only will be giving her mind wholesome exercise, but also she will be acquiring a measure of culture and furnishing herself a keen interest as well!

STAGE - SCREEN - MUSIC - DRAMA

'LUCKEE GIRL,' SNAPPILY CHIC, OPENS SHUBERT APOLLO

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

ATTENDED by the usual felicitations which always intrude themselves into mild celebrations, the enterprising Shubert Freres have formally taken possession of the old B. F. Keith Theater, christened it Apollo, and listened to Mayor Nichols extol them as worthy taxpayers who settle promptly. The main attraction, however, was "Luckee Girl," an adapted musical comedy done in the free manner of the Parisian stage. His Honor worked only in front of the curtain.

THERE are many points of interest in "Luckee Girl" that will catch the ear and the eye of the sophisticated playgoer. It is frankly what the boys out for a good time refer to as deliciously Parisian. It is naughty by reference—not by action. To the joy of the faithful veteran who has taken position in musical comedy for season upon season, only to discover he has paid double time for the same old mixture, "Luckee Girl" will flash before him as a joy unrefined. New faces stalk the stage, and pretty ones too, a new comedian, of massive size, made you wonder where, in Heaven's name, so large a package could have been kept so long under cover.

Nicholas Young

Billy House was the bulk of the performance—personally, and in the determining results. He toiled both alone and with frisky ensembles at his heels. He was tireless and sweaty, but that couldn't be helped, for it was a hot night. Even as the backstage direction revealed flaws, so, too, must the ever faithful engineer, in the excitement of the big occasion, have forgotten to bank his fires. "Luckee Girl" was admirably cast, even to the last despairing chorus man. At last a kindly word may be uttered for the boy who scampers through musical pieces without getting anywhere.

And there were good tunes, well sung. Leota Lane, a blond-ish belle with a willing smile, more than held her own in several song numbers; Eric Titus also managed well in spite of any prejudice one may have in the matter of baritone lovers. Harry Puck, the only familiar face in the long line, was just himself—a clean comedian, a safe juvenile and his own champion accompanist when the story called for melody. Others in the cast who stirred a laugh or two were Lou Powers, Maude Allen, Lorraine Weimer and Doris Vinton. For good measure in instrumention, the Four Diplomats piled diligently.

While you may be sure that every musical comedy, imported or domestic, is borns down by a familiar trade mark, "Luckee Girl" appears to have escaped some of the most glaring sins of managerial tinkering. On its fresh, new faces alone, it deserves a friendly nod.

Week's Features

HOWARD—(Burlesque) "Girls From Happyland," with Irving Selig and Ben Lerner.

GLOBE AND CASINO—"Abie's Irish Rose" and "The Rainbow"; starting Thursday, Greta Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs." Clark and McCullough in "The Diplomats," and "Melancholy Dame."

BOWDOIN—"Weary River," with Richard Barthelmess; "Morgan's Last Raid" and "When Money Comes."

'WILD ORCHIDS' AT ORPHEUM

Greta Garbo, Lewis Stone and Nils Asther are starred on the screen at Loew's Orpheum this week in "Wild Orchids," a vivid tale of love in the tropics, which is presented with synchronized music and sound effects. Miss Garbo gives a sincere interpretation of a neglected wife, entangled in an "affair." Her beauty, always present, is especially pronounced in this film, where she appears to fine advantage before the exotic background of Javanese life. Lewis Stone and Nils Asther are splendid as the rivals in this entertaining screen drama.

Greta Garbo

On stage, Loew's vaudeville is headed by Lieut. Gitz-Rice and his Northwest Mounties. Gitz-Rice is also an accomplished song writer, and in the course of the act he reviews some of his most popular song hits. Included in this act is Gabrielle Tremblay, petite and experienced dancer.

Jack Conway, a local product, appears will his own company in a very humorous comedy sketch entitled "In the Cellar." George Watts and Belle Hawley have a good collection of comedy bits and songs. Other on the bill are Jack Goldie, blackface comedian, and Alpine Sports, a dancing and acrobatic trio.

Continuing Shows

COPLEY—"The Ringer," a mystery comedy by Edgar Wallace. Highly seasoned with shocks, thrills and laughs.

COLONIAL—Polly Walker in "Billie." This lively musical play now enters its two final weeks.

WILBUR—"The Trial of Mary Dugan." A chorus girl on trial for her life sobs herself to freedom.

MAJESTIC—"The Skull," a mystery shocker. An odd collection of people in baffling situations.

GAYETY SHOW IS FULL OF PEP

The Gayety Theater special show as part of the nation-wide burlesque anniversary, is exactly in keeping with the anniversary spirit, for it is fast, peppy, tuneful and colorful. Ann Corio, known as "the most beautiful girl in burlesque," is a clever entertainer.

Others, including Clyde Bates, a droll tramp comedian, and Walter (Pep) Smith, who won his nickname by his song mannerisms, Lew Petel, straight man; Abo Gere, Hebrew comedian; Jean Gaskell, ingenue, and Buddie Nichols, soubrette, contribute finely to the colorful and humorous scenes.

The chorus added much. Holub's Gayety girls are always snagged into active support of the chorus girls, and the combination went over. The show had plenty of humor and some good singing.

Suit Against Mill Company Entered

Fall River, April 2—The $500,000 action of William Durfee of this city against the Pocasset Mfg. Co., which was filed a few weeks ago at the local registry of deeds, was entered on the docket at Taunton. The action is brought to recover damages for the destruction of the Mohican Road in the fire of February, 1928, that originated in the Pocasset plant.

Chauffeur Ends Life

Portland, Me., April 2—Alfred H. Offen, 52, a chauffeur, of 32 Oxford st., committed suicide by hanging in the city home on March 19, it was learned for the first time from a death certificate filed by Dr. William Holt, medical examiner.

JIMMIE BARTON STAR AT KEITH MEMORIAL

A high and shining mark in entertainment is hung up this week at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theater for future programs to match.

Few bills have been so happy in a literal way, and truly it can be termed "laugh week" at that showshop.

It has been some time since dancing Jimmie Barton appeared in the Hub, but at the Memorial he more than makes up for the long absence. The former Shubert and Ziegfeld revue and musical comedy star exhibits a masterpiece in his portrayal of inebriation and the dancing feats he performs when called back time and time again, result gratifyingly furore.

On many another bill, any one of three acts on the week's bill would hold down the featured spot—the choice being somewhat of a toss-up.

With her electric personality, and her sparkling magnetism, Ann Codee, absent for a year, returns to furnish nearly a half hour of hilarity with the assistance of two comedians, who, unfortunately, are unidentified in the program.

Roger Imhof, of course, is a standby, but for this swing on the circuit he has improved vastly his famous comedy, "In a Pest House," and, with Marcelle Correene and J. Woodford Ray as foils, he rolls through a barrage of bulls and bumps his trick door even funnier than before.

Then there is Margaret Schilling, both beautiful and talented, the recent star of "My Maryland" and "A la Carte." She presents several popular numbers and one from out the semiclassic division. An entrancing soprano who deserves her characterization, "The New American Prima Donna."

Making up the balance of the bill are Ethel Parker and Fred Babo, with their Philippiano Sextette; the Lemma Troupe; Colleen Moore in "Why Be Good," on the screen, which, incidentally, introduces the R. C. A. Photophone to Keith Memorial patrons, and the usual newsreel.

Legion Post to Entertain Bruins

The Boston Bruins, hockey champions of the world, will be entertained by the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, Thursday night at a special midnight all-star show at the Keith-Albee Theater.

Carroll Swan will act as master of ceremonies. Among the theatrical celebrities to appear will be June O'Day from "Billie," James Barton from B. F. Keith's, Billy House of the Luckee Girl company, Susanne Keener from the "Silver Swan," and E. E. Clive of the Copley players. Music will be furnished by the 110th Cavalry band.

New York, April 2—Five young men, apparently wealthy youths who carefully prearranged plan, held up a Long Island Railroad station in Brooklyn Manor, Queens, stole $2000 from the safe and escaped in an automobile, after one of them had clubbed with a revolver butt John Urzo, station porter.

ART AT ITS BEST IN 'MELODY' AT LOEW'S STATE

Crowds stormed Loew's State yesterday to see "The Broadway Melody," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing photoplay. As many notices had forecast, it proved a show within a show, a drama that revolved about the production of a lavish Broadway stage revue. There are tunes in it that would grace any musical comedy there are songs and dances that match what is being done on the stage. And this is by no means the whole of "The Broadway Melody," for it boasts an unusual backstage story, telling the fortunes and misfortunes that befall a "sister" act.

Bessie Love

Bessie Love triumphs tremendously as one of the sisters. Anita Page supplies her striking good looks as the other half of the act. They both talk, they both sing, they both act, but Bessie has the better of the going all the way.

Nor are the masculine stars lacking. Charles King plays the villain, and Jed Prouty does a fine piece of acting as the theatrical agent.

This all-talking film has been fairly saturated in the atmosphere of the theater. Its characters converse in vaudeville lingo, and all the trials and troubles of the "sister act" are vividly shown. If they have songs to sing, they are brand new songs, concocted by noted song writers. If they dance, they do as well as if they were actually in a Broadway show.

"The Broadway Melody" brings a musical show to the movies and brings it to Boston at least with low prices instead of $6 and more that the average musical would ask. Harry Beaumont's direction is good, the photography is excellent.

On stage, Jimmy Hussey, himself from Broadway, presents a pop-eyed bit.

Flee After Attempt to Remove Tablet

Marshfield, April 2—Two young men in an automobile made an attempt to remove the big bronze tablet at the Webster place, and when accosted by two young men of the town jumped into their auto and made off at great speed. The registration number of the machine was taken. The machine is registered in the name of a Chelsea resident.

Named Librarian

Middletown, Ct., April 2—Willard P. Lewis, for the past 10 years librarian at the University of New Hampshire, was appointed to succeed Dr. William J. Jasper, who will retire as librarian emeritus of Wesleyan University next June, after completing 38 years of service.

New Playbills

TREMONT—"The Silver Swan," a new Viennese operetta. Produced by Herman Gantvoort. To be reviewed later.

HOLLIS—Grant Mitchell in "All the King's Men." A comedy by Fulton Oursler. Produced by Lew Cantor. To be reviewed later.

APOLLO—"Luckee Girl," a musical comedy adapted from the French "Un Bon Garcon." Produced by the Shuberts. Reviewed on this page.

'IT'S A BOY,' AND IT GOES BIG

Just because the stork delivered the goods, they christened the play "It's a Boy," and the birth and the effects it had made an evening of brimming comedy for an audience that simply delighted in the lines and action, as put across by the Keith stock players at the St. James theater last night.

The William Anthony Maguire play wasn't a bit hackneyed. Its humor was delicious; out of the situations into which that baby—and Fate—plunged Ma and Pa, there flowed easy chances for smiles and laughs, with the heart keeping pace with the unfolding of the tale.

The Blakes of Carbondale, Pa., proud parents, move to New York and before long the young mother and father are finding the pace too strong for them. Baby is neglected for night clubs and the like. It is necessary for them to choose between, beginning life anew back home in Carbondale, or endeavoring to keep up the life in the big city. They choose wisely and the play leaves everybody satisfied.

Harold Vermilyea, the new leading man, created an excellent impression as the father. He has a sure, distinctive method. The audience warmed toward him and welcomed him.

Ivy Barton was delightful as Mrs. Blake. George R. Taylor, Thomas McKnight, Jessamine Newcombe and Adrienne Earle were other excellent performers.

B. & M. Takes Over Crossing Control

Private control of grade crossing tenders on the Boston & Maine Railroad has come to an end, and the tenders are back again under direct control of the railroad.

A year ago the railroad entered into a contract with the New England Contracting Co. by which the latter assumed the duties the tenders was taken over by this firm. The contract has been cancelled, it was admitted at the office of the railroad, as the plan did not work out satisfactorily, it was said.

CREEPS GALORE IN KEITH-ALBEE MYSTERY FILM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Conjure up a turbaned mystic of the East, have handy a many-armed Brahma Siva, dish in, also, a plain Brahma, this one hollow, mix well the ingredients on a yacht at sea, adding the paprika of the psychic, and a final sprinkling of an honest-to-goodness vendetta, and lo, presto! you have the 'creeps' and the Keith Albee Theater puts across an exciting mystery film in "The Strange Cargo." It is a screen drama worth seeing, as audiences yesterday and last night attested. Spines chill cold at the eerie things that happen, with a leavening of humor at times to ease off the strain of overmuch tenseness of tingled and gripping plot.

Lee Patrick

Of the 14 in the cast of "stars," Lee Patrick and Kyrle Bellew stand out, and there is a balance to the whole that is very satisfying. June Nash looks good and weeps well and long, and often.

LURE OF JUNGLE WITH THRILLS IN 'SIMBA'

If you've never been charged by a displeased lion and yet yearn for the experience you can get all the thrill by seeing "Simba" at Tremont Temple.

Furthermore, you can enjoy the thrill, putting your mind on it, so to speak, without being harassed by any conscientious scruples against letting yourself be pressed into service as impromptu nore d'ouvre for a lion dinner.

There's no question about it. Big game hunting in darkest Africa is a perfectly lovely experience, especially by moving picture camera—wielded by somebody else.

You don't have to be a lion fan to like "Simba." When Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, fellow adventurers, took the picture series, they aimed to please. They included intimate studies of everything wild from rhinoceroses to hula-hula dancers, and the rhinoceroses were not the wildest of the assortment.

British East Africa and Abyssinia are the ranges upon which most of "Simba's" drama is set, but the South Sea Islands haven't been neglected.

There's also vigorous appeal in it for plain folks, who go to circuses and read Rudyard's adventures and listen to travelogues.

"Simba" is all of them, and the Johnsons are prompt to prove it all real by their personal reminiscences.

POPULARITY WINNERS IN R-K-O HOUR

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

PORTIONS of tonight's Radio-Keith-Orpheum program will originate on the Pacific Coast, with Sophie Tucker, Nick Lucas and Ted Lewis doing their stuff in Los Angeles. Belle Baker, who tied with Sophie Tucker for first place in the popularity ballot just closed, will hail her hearers from New York, as will Van and Schenck, Rudy Vallee and Vincent Lopez. We are told that a total of two million ballots was cast, and that two programs are needed to find time for all the high favorites. The following Tuesday will bring the second group of "requested" entertainers. They don't have popularity contests for radio editors, the gods be thanked.

Address 'Grads'

NORA BRADFORD

RICHARD KLOFKORN

204 GRADUATED FROM MARTHA LEE KITCHEN

By MARTHA LEE

Two hundred and four New England housewives can now flaunt their new Martha Lee diplomas and defy the most critical husband to find a single murmur of grief in the "Kind that mother used to make." For these diplomas, awarded at the graduation exercises of the fifth class of the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery, prove that Mrs. Housewife has faithfully attended the eight weeks' course of these popular cooking matinees and that she has covered every step in practical cookery.

The address of welcome was delivered by Miss Nora Bradford, educational field worker of Postum, Inc. In a half-hour cooking demonstration she prepared a complete luncheon menu covering soup, an open-faced club sandwich, salad, dessert and concoction.

Richard Klofkorn, advertising manager of H. P. Hood & Sons, took charge of the showing of an interesting motion picture taken at the Hood's farm on the Boston Post Road. Goodies for all were also furnished by the H. P. Hood Company, and one of their famous Hood Ice Cream Cakes was donated as a prize in the letter contest.

A health film, featuring Lifebuoy soap was shown by Lever Brothers of Cambridge, who contributed generously to the prizes with a large case of Lux, a case of Rinso, Lux Toilet Soap, and Lifebuoy.

The following ladies were awarded in the letter contest. These letters were written on the benefits and pleasures of the Martha Lee Cooking School, and the winners and awards were as follows:

Large Lamp—Mrs. Jennie Spaulding, 145 Highland ave., Wellington, and Miss Eva Perkins, 2d., Medford.

One-Half Case Lux Toilet Soap, each—Mrs. Dorothy Morgan, 24 Paul st., Brookline, and Mrs. Honora A. Lennen, 44 Cass st., Cambridge.

Given $800 for Crash Injuries

Rutland, Vt., April 2—A jury in Rutland County Court returned a verdict for $8000 against Leroy Parker of Marion, Mass., and Merritt Cox of this city. The plaintiff, who sued for $12,000, was Mrs. Sarah J. Martin of Rutland.

While she was riding with Cox on Oct. 9, 1928, near Middlebury, Cox's car and a motorcycle driven by Parker were in collision at a road intersection. Mrs. Jasmin claims that the accident was due to careless driving on the part of both operators. She was permanently injured, she testified.

Tragedy in Prohibition

Farce and Amazing Spectacles, Too; Hypocrisy Stalks Through the Land

What uproarious farce, what astonishing spectacles, what poignant tragedy Prohibition continues to provide!

One Congressional champion of the obnoxious Jones "five and ten law," always a "staunch Dry," is accused as a "liquor smuggler" in a Federal Court indictment!

Another "consistent Congressional Dry" is accused by Federal agents of having four bottles of liquor in his baggage at the port of New York. He denies it and says that he never drank liquor.

A decent, respectable, church-going, God-fearing mother is shot to death in her own home in Illinois, after her husband had been beaten into insensibility by record-seeking zealots, who claim to have found a gallon of wine after their illegal entry!

While Representative M. Alfred Michaelson of Illinois, Jones Law champion, was obeying the Anti-Saloon League at the last session of Congress, and voting to imprison his fellow-citizens for five years and to fine them $10,000 for dry law violations, he was under indictment for months in the Florida Federal courts as a dry-law violator himself. The case against him will be pushed now.

The Federal indictment charges that one of Michaelson's trunks, on his return from Cuba, contained six quarts of John Haig whiskey, two quarts of creme de menthe, one quart of creme de cacao, one quart of cherry brandy, one keg of plum barbacourt and one quart of taffelskavit.

The Anti-Saloon League sent this "consistent Dry" back to Congress at the last election for another term.

Congressman Morgan, Ohio, another Jones Law champion, had four bottles of liquor in his baggage when he returned from Panama, so Federal Customs agents reported to their superiors. He claimed the right of "free entry" because he had been on an "official mission." It was later revealed that he was not on an "official mission," but he denies drinking or bringing in any liquor.

In the face of these incidents in the nation's daily life, it is well to recall the utterance on the floor of the United States Senate two months ago of former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri. He said:

"It will not be many years before the moral sensibilities of the American people will awake to the fact that the Prohibition Law is the worst crime in the history of the United States, and that the reign of hypocrisy and cant, of false pretense and of chicanery and fraud will come to an ignominious end.

"The day will come when the man who votes for prohibition, but who himself violates the letter and spirit of the law, will be held in that kind of contempt which ought to be visited upon the knavish hypocrite who masks behind pretended virtue and who seeks to hold office by virtue of his false pretense.

"I saw this prohibitory law voted, and as I heard the roll, I heard the affirmative voice of man after man who had drunk liquor more or less all his life."

How prophetic! Fanaticism run riot seeks to achieve universal temperance by compulsory total abstinence and hypocrisy stalks through the land, even in the seats of the mighty!

The Bill of Rights becomes a scrap of paper; constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness are regarded as mere piffle when dry zealots are rampant.

What glorious commentaries upon Prohibition in America!

The Braves

Their "Need Something"

Fans are counting the days to the opening of the baseball season. Two weeks from today the Brooklyn Nationals come to Braves Field.

John B. Foster, looking them over not long since at St. Petersburg, Fla., came to the conclusion that the Braves "need something," which is doubtless true. The catchers, in Mr. Foster's opinion, are "fair." The pitchers, he thinks, are "not there." The "outfield bobbles when the infield is going right," while the "infield creates a scrambled condition for itself when the outfield happens to be at its best."

That may turn out to be not nearly so bad as it sounds. We should think an infield made up of Fred Maguire, George Sisler, Rabbit Maranville and Lester Bell might be able to give a good account of itself from the drop of the hat. A lot depends upon how we start. If we only get "the breaks"!

Boston is a good ball town. With the right sort of encouragement from the "magnates," as for some reason the owners of baseball clubs are called, it can be demonstrated to be one of the most profitable constituencies in the country.

Two weeks before the curtain rises, we are inclined to root for "Johnny" Evers, "Hank" Gowdy and the "Rabbit," and to hope that they may be able to find the elusive "something" which Mr. Foster of the Sun says they need.

So far as that goes, we all "need something." Among the things we need, many of us, are open ball parks and plenty of sun.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, April 2—Something about New York creates an insatiable hunger for publicity. Men and women caught in the impudent audacity of its spell not only make themselves superbly ridiculous but sacrifice reputations to splash on the front page.

Where—save New York—could be found a "Daddy" Browning, for instance? Here was a man born to wealth and culture who showed amazing aptitude for business. Yet he became so entranced seeing his name in print he hired a press agent and indulged in antics that made him an international topic for cheap jests.

The Earl Carroll bathtub incident was the tragic climax of a rising taste for headlines. Publicity has inspired actresses to face pneumonia gamboling through snow barefoot in Central Park, to "fake" suicide and risk their neck climbing flag poles. Picture newspapers added fuel to the craze.

Nothing is too intimate for exploitation. New Yorkers mortgage homes to "dunk the body" in Palm Beach waves in their ache for the rotogravure sections. Speakeasies line their walls with caricatures of those with the spotlight phobia. Even the liaison is glorified.

Broadway, especially, always has a picturesque freebooter out to gain fleshly enjoyments, power and fame through the newspaper puff. More than likely he is one of those arch-swindlers who has mastered the shadiest technique in Wall Street, but he backs a show or supper club and becomes a celeb.

The late "Diamond Jim" Brady was a conspicuous example of the growing guild. He was an astute business man who piled up millions. Yet nightly he decorated himself in a fantastic array of jewels to strut up and down theater aisles at first nights with a Dolly sister on each arm.

From Jim Fisk to Arnold Rothstein, the White Way has had an outstanding figure, with few morals and less manners, upon whom it bestows its mantle of fame. It haloes them with mystery and grandeur, and people, fascinated by the glamour, long to know them—even, indeed, to become familiars.

THERE are several press agencies whose chief activities are devoted, sub rosa, to making celebrities. The clients are mostly newly rich longing to give the tail of the metropolitan lion a twist. They are, hollyhooed by "stunts"—outfitting a trick apartment, giving dinners to frayed noblemen or authoring a "ghost written" novel. Many pay as high as $30,000 a year for such exploitation.

THERE is a type of Manhattan buccaneer who, despite frequent exposures, rarely fails to find his galaxy of shining marks yearly. This year he took more than a dozen from the Social Register for a buggy ride. He works carefully and with precision.

No matter how strict the by-laws he wiggles into an exclusive club. His profession is vaguely defined as "in the street." He is a prince of entertainers and always sending clusters of orchids to wives of new acquaintances.

His is "the smart racket." When he has collected sheep for the shearing, he gives them a rush phone call. He is on the inside of a warm one, and if they'll hurry the check he will include them in the loot. They usually fail.

"YOU like," writes Manhattan Traveling Man, "to give an impression New York is just another hick town. Do you know that basic in your home burg the leading merchant is featuring bustles?"

Don't be that way. It's just Gay Ninety week back here.

A CRITIC of Broadway play complains all the musical plays these days are only for the young who like voddo-do boo-boop-a-doom and collegiate stamping. Well, as one of the old front row rams, I don't care that for lavender and old lace sentiment or 17th century swashbucklers storming the moated castle. I like to cup an ear and imagine myself the handsome young man in white flannels with oiled hair stepping out from the bevy of girls, to sing: "Why make a fuss over me?" Then they cheer me home.

CABLES Frank T. from Havana: "Did you hear about my finicky uncle who insisted upon two practise swings before his hanging?"

Don't you think I ever go any place? They cracked about him in a Broadway show early this season.

Three-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING.

THE traveler in search of something different may go a long way before he finds anything to equal the picturesque sights which will meet his eyes in Siam.

The Siamese people are almost all of the peasant class, and their principal occupation is the raising of rice. The typical peasant home is a wooden structure on long poles standing on the bank of a river or creek. It consists of one, two or three oblong buildings opening on to a wooden platform, from which a flight of steps or a crude ladder descends to the ground or into the water. Each oblong consists of one or more rooms opening into a narrow veranda which skirts the platform. The kitchen occupies a small backroom, from which refuse is dropped through holes in the floor. The people being mostly riparian, it follows that they are expert watermen. Children usually learn to swim as early as they learn to walk, women go in boats to markets which are held on the water, and monks make their alms-seeking rounds in canoes. Many people live in boats, and practically all transportation is by water.

One of the most peculiar customs in Siam revolves above a special class of inhabitants, called Mon, many of whom occupy official positions. They are of Tailaing stock and descend in many cases from captives of war taken from the old Pegu kingdom in Burma. The Mon are recognized by a little fringe around their foreheads. Siamese women seldom indulge in long hair. The Mon, like other officials, no matter how petty, are extremely superfluous and overbearing in their attitude toward ordinary citizens.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE Boston Evening American will, from time to time, print letters on timely subjects from its readers. These should be short and include the name and address of the writer, but not necessarily for publication.

PRAISES EDITORIAL

Editor Boston American:

It is quite probable that from the Boston American's viewpoint, the editorial in your paper under the heading, "Patrolman Sheehan," was not unusual. But from the readers' viewpoint, and the writer of this letter in particular, it was the finest bit of service we have ever come across.

Will you please accept my hearty thanks for it? I want you to know that your explanation was clear and to the point. With best wishes to you and your paper, I am,

Cordially,
HARRY M. FLETCHER.

STREET CAR COURTESY

Editor Boston American:

In your paper of March 27 you published a cartoon by Franklin Collier showing Raleigh spreading his coat before Queen Elizabeth, and his companion, a young woman with a baby in her arms indulging in strap-hanging while the seats are all filled with husky males ogling her or making comments upon her. The cartoon was captioned: "Ain't It the Truth"

Mr. Collier is usually good, but in this matter he is 100 per cent wrong. I have never seen a woman carrying an infant who did not have a gentleman or lady spring up to offer a seat. Fellow passengers simply will not permit a baby to be imperilled by a parent balancing on a strap. Had Mr. Collier shown the young lady alone it would have been the truth.

My mother had snow-white hair as long as I can remember, yet I don't believe that she has had to stand more than twice in her life. Courtesy is always extended to her white locks. As for me, I stand nine out of ten times, so you see I have no axe to grind.

The men act abominably in our rapid transits, especially at rush hours, but they are not guilty of making a woman carrying a baby stand even then.

A WOMAN RIDER.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

IF I bring you laughter only for a day, will you prize me after joy has flown away? If I weave you fancies airy as the mist where the moonlight dances, and the fays keep tryst, will your love still hunger when their spell is gone, at the chilling finger of the spectral dawn? Questions are but folly; none can fathom love, joy or melancholy both alluring prove. Be it tears or laughter, be it shade or sun, I will love you after all life's web is spun.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DID you have a hard time as a youngster?

Did your folks fail to understand you? Did they give you the lean end of things?

Well, that's too bad, Old Timer.

Youngsters ought to be loved and cherished. Youngsters ought to be happy.

But after all you survived it!

That young misery was over with years ago.

Why do you mourn over it now? All your mourning won't change that past, so why let it spoil your present?

Let it lie buried. Forget the things you didn't have—set your face toward the things you may have—

LET'S GO!

Have you always felt handicapped by your temperament?

Are you sensitive—easily depressed?

Is it hard for you to trust people?

Do you dread making changes?

Well, what of it? There's nothing unusual about that, partner. Everyone's sensitive — everyone's easily depressed, everyone dreads making changes.

These qualities aren't individual handicaps. They're burdens the whole human race must tote.

You've been aggravating your condition by thinking that you've a monopoly on misery—

Nursing the idea that God was picking on you—

Well, you haven't, and He isn't.

You're just a regular human, with the average equipment, and you have as good a chance of getting a bang out of life as the next chap.

So stop thinking you're the world's worst martyr.

Wipe your chin, prick up your ears.

LET'S GO!

Has a friend betrayed you?

That's tough luck.

Hurts like that are bound to leave scars. But they needn't leave open, gangrenous wounds unless we infect them with our own bitterness.

The hurts that our friends deal us through selfishness or weakness are never half as bad as the hurts we deal ourselves through our own stubborn brooding.

So, snap out of it!

Stop poisoning yourself!

LET'S GO!

Has death robbed you of someone you loved better than life?

God comfort you if it has. And be assured He will comfort you if you will let Him.

I do not know what God is any more than you do, my friend. But I do know that somewhere there is strength for those who are willing to take, and healing for those who will open their bruised hearts to the cleansing tides of life.

So do not regard death as a personal tragedy which Fate has maliciously dealt to you. Take it rather as a great mystery, a perpetual communion, in which all men must share. Accept its agony with dignity as an initiation into a greater department of life, which indeed, it is.

Face life's tall challenge.

LET'S GO!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Our dispositions generally run riot in propriety, nor is it easy to bear pleasant fortune with a well balanced mind. —Ovid.

Human nature is not a machine to be built after a model and set to do exactly the work prescribed for it, but a tree, which requires to grow and develop itself on all sides, according to the tendencies of the inward forces which make it a living thing. —Mill.

Frugality is the science of avoiding unnecessary expenditure, or the art of managing our property with moderation. —Seneca.

The essential difference between painting and daubing is that a painter lays not a grain more color than is needed. —Ruskin.

He who freely magnifies what hath been nobly done, and fears not to declare as freely what might be done better, gives ye the best covenant of his fidelity.- Milton.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

DIVORCE is like war. Nobody wants it, nobody approves of it, but everybody is more or less prepared for it, these days.

A modern marriage may be full of problems and surprises—but you must admit that there are very few dull moments in it.

A little coddling and flattery won't hurt your husband. But when you start picking up his clothes, hunting for his shoes, and waiting on him as though he were a spoiled prima donna, you are just ruining him for his next wife.

After a long bachelorhood spent in making love to every woman, a man is sometimes glad to retire to the shelter of matrimony, and enjoy scrapping with one woman, for a change.

Whichever way you look at it, it's a hard life for a woman! When the knees are rococo, the ankles are so apt to be Gothic; and when the hips are down, to the vanishing point, the calves are with "yesterday's seven thousand years."

"No country can rise higher than its work-level," says Henry Ford. True, Sir Henry—nor higher than its love-level, its friend-level and, above all, its WOMAN-level. A country's progress is measured by its ethics and its ideals.

Nowadays, when a man forgets the morning kiss, his wife doesn't suspect that his love is growing cold; she merely wonders if he is getting enough of the right vitamin.

The Jones law may put a quick end to promiscuous petting. It requires at least three drinks to make a "petting party" look anythink like "love."

One of the puzzling effects of spring is a man's impulse to send HER a letter by air mail when he has nothing to say but "I love you."

Modernism: It's a wise father that knows as much as his own child!
